Rule of NRA By Five Aids Is Johnson's Summer Plan

General to Make Swing Around Country in New Sales Drive.

Set-up to Provide Him Long Vacation

Recovery Chief to Stay on Sidelines Except in Emergencies.

(Copyright 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, has decided to turn over a large part of running the Blue Eagle machine this summer to a group of five principal subordinates.

The arrangement thus far is informal. Johnson himself will step in to make decisions which legally must be made by him and to settle disputes, if any, among his "board of directors."

The Blue Eagle administrator already has taken advantage of the chance to rest. He has been in or near New York for almost a week, self-reportedly playing golf, but conferring at times with Bernard Baruch and others.

Within the next three days Johnson plans to leave on his swing around the country. In dozens of speeches he will try to resell the Blue Eagle and put in a word for the New Deal as a whole at the same time.

Members of Board.

The board of directors to be left in charge of NRA probably will include G. A. Lynch, NRA administrative officer; George L. Berry, division administrator; A. R. Glancy, division administrator; Robert W. Lea, assistant administrator for industry, and George Buckley, acting division administrator and publicity adviser.

Lynch is expected to be what might be called the chairman of the board, but the others will have equal powers where fundamental decisions are required. Each executive similarly will continue his present duties, and join with the others in overseeing NRA as a whole.

The whole plan was conceived for the simple purpose of allowing the general to take a rather continuous vacation this summer, but officials look upon the step as important from two viewpoints:

1. It will constitute an interesting trial of how NRA can get along without its bustling boss.

2. It will give sort of a tentative test to the idea of commission control as contrasted to one man leadership.

Apparently the plan does not contemplate any radical revision of the NRA organization beyond the

Cotton Code Charge Filed

First Complaint Alleges Baltimore Company Acts Unfairly.

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—Arthur E. Hungerford, director of the National Emergency Council for Maryland, revealed today that the first complaint of violation of the code of fair competition of the cotton garment industry had been referred to the office of the United States attorney.

Hungerford named Feldman & Sons, operators of plants in Baltimore and on the Eastern Shore as against whom the complaint had been filed.

"This is the first complaint of code violation which has developed since the office of the director for the National Emergency Council for Maryland began to function, Mr. Hungerford said.

Besides the Baltimore plant, Feldman & Sons also have a plant at Delmar, Md.

Hungerford has called a meeting of the cotton garment contractors on the Eastern Shore in Salisbury tomorrow night. The meeting will be attended by Joseph M. Atkinson, regional director of the National Code Authority of the Cotton Garment Industry.

Six Planes Prepare For Alaska Flight

Dayton-to-Dallas Test Hop Made in Half a Day.

Dayton, Ohio, July 8 (AP).—Six Army planes today hopped from Dayton to Dallas, Tex., between Ohio's dawn and 11:30 a. m., central standard time.

The flight was made as a test preliminary to the projected flight of the same planes from Washington to Fairbanks, Alaska.

Maj. Hugh Knerr commanded the squadron. Officers at Patterson Field expect the squadron to remain at Dallas tonight, returning here tomorrow.

N. Y. Storm Breaks Heat Wave.

New York, July 8 (AP).—The break in the 17-day heat wave, begun last night by thunderstorms, brought relief today to the city's millions. Today's maximum was 74.

U. S. to Punish Price-Raisers, Lewis Asserts

Justice Office to Fight Conspirators; Borah, G. O. P. Attacked.

The Department of Justice will act immediately to punish business interests which have conspired to raise prices, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, chairman of the Democratic Senate campaign committee, declared yesterday in a statement at the Mayflower Hotel.

The Administration spokesman, who on Saturday promised that President Roosevelt is ready to modify operation of the recovery program, if necessary, to advance business prosperity, sounded his contrasting warning in a formal answer to Senator William Borah (Republican), Idaho, chief critic of the New Deal.

Replying to Borah's campaign speech, in which the Idaho Senator said monopoly thrives under the New Deal, Lewis stated:

"This Administration has just been able to discover the responsible parties to this conspiracy which is designed to lift the price of everything. It has not had time to take steps to punish them. It will proceed at once to both punish and obstruct this further injustice."

Tells of Violations.

Having set forth on the previous day that President Roosevelt "desires particularly to know where business feels that the legislation of the New Deal is inappropriate to its welfare," Lewis yesterday told of violation of codes of the NRA by "certain manufacturing and financial establishments," against which the Justice Department will proceed.

Lewis hit back at Republican campaigners who are attacking "monopoly," declaring the G. O. P.

Car Kills Girl At Martinsville

Christine Rorer, 16, Dies When Auto Smashes Her Machine.

Martinsville, Va., July 8 (Spl.).—Christine Rorer, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Rorer, was killed tonight when the automobile in which she was riding was struck by another.

Miss Rorer was in the automobile driven by Emerson Dalton, who was backing his auto from a filling station. As Dalton neared the street his car was struck by one driven by James Philpot, colored.

A large piece of the broken windshield in Dalton's auto struck the girl on the neck, cutting her jugular vein.

Miss Rorer was rushed to a nearby hospital, but she died from loss of blood as she was entering the building.

Police held Dalton and Philpot for investigation. No charges have been filed.

Bullfighter Badly Gored.

Seville, Spain, July 8 (AP).—Rosenberg Lopez, a Mexican performer, was badly gored as he attempted to place two banderillas (darts), held in his teeth, in the neck of a small bull at a performance here tonight.

Gasoline Rise Brings Threat To Stop Sales

100 Virginia and Maryland Dealers Say Obedience Will Ruin Trade.

Increased gasoline prices effective today, resulting from operation of the oil code, brought the threat from more than 100 dealers of nearby Maryland and Virginia that they may defy the code or close their stations.

The increased prices affect a wide area in suburban Maryland and Virginia where filling stations have been selling gasoline at District of Columbia prices. Within the District prices will remain unchanged.

Gasoline prices in Virginia will be boosted 1 cent a gallon in a zone starting at the Potomac River and bordered on the south by Hunting Creek, just below Alexandria, and Falls Church. South of that the price will go up by 2 cents a gallon to Merryfield in Fairfax County.

Maryland dealers in the immediate vicinity of Washington may continue to charge District prices for gas. An increased price of 1 8-10 cents a gallon will be charged, however, by dealers outside of Bethesda, Four Corners, Wheaton and Beltsville.

Difference in Tax.

Reason for the hiking of gasoline prices lies in the differential between the 2-cent gas tax of the District of Columbia and the taxes in Virginia and Maryland, which are 5 and 4 cents a gallon, respectively.

Under the oil code the practice hitherto followed by which major oil companies and local dealers jointly absorbed the higher State taxes, so the nearby dealers could

Ham and Eggs for 3 at $3.74 Inspired Sailors' Riot at Nice

Nice, France, July 8 (U.P.).—A bill equivalent in francs to $3.74 for ham and eggs and coffee for three caused the American sailors' riots along the Riviera last Friday night.

The proprietor of the cafe where the trouble started revealed this today when owners of five cafes wrecked by enlisted men from the U. S. battleships Wyoming and Arkansas filed claims with police for $400 damage.

The bills listed smashed chinaware, souvenirs and the bicycle of one cafe owner. He said the last he saw of it, a joyous gob was riding off at full tilt.

The fighting began in one cafe and spread to the others when three sailors thought $3.74 in any kind of money was too much for "ham and eggs." They backed up their objections by punching the waiter and when others came to his aid, the sailors made it general.

One suffered a fractured skull and scores were injured.

Two in Barnstorming Plane Crash to Death

Delaware, Ohio July 8 (AP).—Two men crashed to their deaths in a barnstorming airplane 3 miles east of here late toray. They were Elmer Sharrock, 23, a passenger, and Rodney Howey, 35, pilot.

Their ship apparently went into a stall as Howey sought to land. After the crash the plane burst into flames.

'Frisco Grim As City-Wide Strike Nears

Troops Gird for Flareup as Teamsters Vote Walkout.

Move to Aid Dockmen Would Paralize All Transport.

San Francisco, July 8 (AP).—San Francisco teamsters voted 1,220 to 271 today to stage a city-wide walkout Thursday in sympathy with striking maritime workers.

While the National Guard continued to hold the water front in a grip of steel after the savage rioting, in which two men were killed, the threat of a paralyzing strike of all unions in the city became more alarming as a result of the teamsters' action, which was taken subject to final confirmation Wednesday.

Previously 15 other of the city's 120 trade unions had been reported by their representatives to be in favor of a general strike, if one is called. They included motion picture projectionists, waiters, waitresses, certified welders, boilermakers, barbers, machinists, the sign, seal and pictorial workers, painters, shipyard workers, garment workers, bronze and metal workers, window cleaners, the pile driver, dock and wharf workers, and the cleaners and dyers.

"Strike Now!" Is Cry.

Urged by maritime workers to "strike now! Victory is near," the teamsters voted overwhelmingly to leave their trucks throughout the city. Transport facilities thus would come to a virtual halt on land as well as on water.

The decision to confirm the vote Wednesday night was made to allow the drivers a chance to reverse their stand should developments in the marine strike make a walkout inadvisable.

Leaders of other unions, who would not allow their names to be used, hailed the vote of the teamsters as the first big step toward a general strike.

Since the water front strike began, May 9, the teamsters here have refused to move goods to and from the docks, but have handled the city's other general trucking needs.

Bodies Lay in State.

Meanwhile the bodies of Harry S. Sperry and George Coundourakis, killed in Thursday's battles between strikers and police in which 32 workers also were shot, lay in state at International Longshoremen's headquarters, and were viewed by hundreds.

Japanese Caught With Soviet Papers

Military Attache Is Freed After Discovery.

Moscow, July 8 (AP).—A Rosta news agency dispatch from Blagoveschensk, in far eastern Krai, said today that a Japanese military officer attempted to remove documents from the desk of the Soviet consulate at Sakhalian, Manchuria.

The dispatch said that while a banquet was being given the chief of the local Japanese military mission went to the desk where he abstracted consular reports.

The officer was detected by a secretary who took the papers and let him leave the building.

Harriman to Begin Prison Term Today

New York, July 8 (AP).—Today was Joseph W. Harriman's last day of freedom before he starts serving the four-year prison term for misapplication of funds of his defunct bank.

The 67-year-old, white-haired banker will be taken into custody tomorrow at the Doctors Hospital by U. S. Marshal Raymond J. Mulligan, and moved to the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Berlin Calls For Parleys On U.S. Debt

Schacht Tells Harrison Germany Is Willing to Negotiate.

Interest Payments on Dawes and Young Loans Involved,

Basel, Switzerland, July 8 (AP).—Means of obtaining interest payments to American holders of German Dawes and Young loan bonds were discussed at a private luncheon today by George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank.

Dr. Schacht was amiable and ready to go into all phases of the problem, but pointed out that negotiations between the United States and the German government will be necessary to bring about an adjustment of the question.

Harrison, it was understood, acceded to this view.

The American banker, referring to the Anglo-German agreement under which interest is to be paid to British holders, emphasized his opinion that Americans will expect to receive exactly the same treatment as bondholders of other nations.

Welcomed by Bankers.

Harrison declined to comment on views presented by Dr. Schacht, but he did not seem to be displeased with results of the informal conference.

Harrison, attending for the first time a meeting of the governors of world central banks this afternoon, received a warm welcome. There was a general exchange of views on technical problems.

Questions were raised and answered concerning the problems of financial credits and monetary policies due to the fact that some nations are off the gold standard while others retain it.

Harrison answered many queries concerning the banking conditions in the United States.

Gold Future Discussed.

After the general meeting broke up, bankers formed in small groups. In separate, informal discussions the German moratorium, the future of the gold bloc nations, war debts and the possibility of England stabilizing its financial system on a gold basis all had their innings.

World financiers hope, it was revealed, to turn the Bank for International Settlements into an instrument for solving complex intergovernmental monetary problems on a wide scale, including clearance of postal and telegraph payments and international rail and air travel fees.

To carry out this ambitious scheme, financiers admit, cooperation of the United States would be necessary, and the plans are being talked about during Harrison's visit.

Just as Geneva, the seat of the League of Nations, is the meeting

Batista Arrests More Former Army Officers

Havana, July 8 (AP).—The forces of Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of the army, continued their raids today against former army officers, as Batista charged that a Nation-wide conspiracy to overthrow the government had been thwarted by numerous arrests. Batista said more arrests could be expected in addition to the three score or more already made.

A 50-pound bomb was found today in the Calixto Garcia Hospital, but was removed safely.

150 Farmers Sworn In To Quiet N. J. Strikers

Bridgeton, N. J., July 8 (U.P.).—One hundred and fifty farmers were sworn in tonight as special deputies to guard the Seabrook farm where strike violence is feared tomorrow.

The farmers will be armed with shotguns to prevent 500 strikers and sympathizers led by Donald Henderson, Communist, and former Columbia professor, from their announced intention of blocking work at the 5,700-acre farm and cannery.

Rockefeller, 95, Leaves Bed For Quiet Birthday With Son

Lakewood, N. J., July 8 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller passed his ninety-fifth birthday quietly today in the company of his son, John D. Rockefeller, jr.

A gratifying break of over 20 degrees in the temperature brought and end to the intensive heat wave of the last fortnight and enabled the aged capitalist to rise from his bed for the first time in two weeks, an authoritative source disclosed.

The heat, which at times has risen to 102 degrees, had visibly taxed the oil man's energy, friends of the family said, and kept him confined to his room at Golf House with all blinds drawn.

The younger Rockefeller arrived last night from New York. Neither father nor son attended church today although three members of the household, Ward Madison, the elder Rockefeller's secretary; Mrs. Fannie Evans, his second cousin, who is housekeeper at Golf House, and another member of his personal staff were present at union services All Saints Episcopal Church.

The Rev. John Merritt Hunter offered to come to Golf House and conduct a special service this afternoon, but later received word from Mr. Rockefeller expressing thanks but deeming the plan "inadvisable."

Beginning the ninety-sixth year of a life which he has so often described as "quiet and simple," Mr. Rockefeller clung more firmly than ever to the seclusion which is part of the "contentment" he enjoys.

No cars were seen to pass through the gates at the entrance to Golf House, though several limousines paused while their occupants, presumably friends of the family, left their calling cards with the gatekeeper with messages of felicitation to the venerable philanthropist.

This year, friends say, he has left the estate only once since his arrival Memorial Day, and did not once appear, even before the heat wave began, on the nine-hole golf course on the estate grounds.

Defiant Germany Asks For Peace With France, Warns World of War

Fear of France Held Cause of Reich Plea

Hess' Appeal for Peace Overrides Chiefs of Storm Troops.

Berlin, July 8 (AP).—The plea of Rudolph Hess, Hitler's most-trusted lieutenant, to France and the world for peace and understanding was interpreted here today as showing that the Nazi government is smarting under the lashes of unfavorable press comment and is dreading the possible consequences of French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou's European travels.

Hess' tone of pleading with the French, his wooing of the war veterans across the border and his unusual compliments to Barthou were in marked contrast with the attitude of the Wilhelmstrasse only two weeks ago.

At that time, it is known, a suggestion was made by a friendly third party that Hitler ought once more publicly to proclaim his government's willingness to come to an understanding with France.

It was understood that the French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, was ready to use such a pronouncement as a lever toward resuming negotiations for a bilateral agreement analogous to the German-Polish pact.

At that time a high foreign office functionary stated: "Hitler has declared before the whole world that he is ready to come to an understanding with France. It is up to France to see the hand stretched out to her. Hitler can not be expected to repeat what he said. That would be undignified."

Hess' speech indicated the Ger-

RUDOLPH HESS.

Chief's Primary Aim Is to Avoid War, Says Rudolph Hess.

Prepared to Fight Invasion, However

Nazi 'Purge' in Putting Down Rebellion Is Defended.

Koenigsberg, Germany, July 8 (AP).—Rudolph Hess, cabinet minister known as Chancellor Hitler's "second self," in an amazing address today pleaded for an understanding with France, sounded a warning against impending war and defied any nation to invade Germany.

The speech was delivered before Nazi chieftains of Prussia, and was broadcast throughout the nation. Translations then were broadcast to the remotest corners of the world, showing the emphasis placed on this pronouncement, which followed by just a week the bloody "purge" of the Nazi party.

The speech was amazing not only because of its appeal to France, but also because of an implied warning that war threatens Europe and its defiance to invaders.

Appeal to France.

The appeal to France was underscored by Hess as he suddenly switched from German to French and shouted, speaking of the miseries of war.

"Malheur pour nous, malheur pour vous, et malheur pour tout, pour le monde." (Unhappiness for us, unhappiness for you, unhappiness for all, for the world.)

"I turn to the comrades of the front, both here and on the other side of the trenches," said Hess. "Be honest: didn't we experience horror at the thought of death?

"When hand grenades were hurled at us, when poisonous gas threatened to choke us, despite our gas masks, when we heard the cries of anguish from the dying, when horror of every kind surrounded us, did we not ask ourselves, 'can not humanity be spared all this?'

Attack on Conflict.

"To be sure, out there in the trenches we felt ourselves real men. We knew we were defending the Fatherland. We would not have missed the experience.

"Yet, we, the first fighters, want to avoid another war wherein the trench soldiers will again pay the bill.

"I say as a veteran to veterans across the bonderland, I as a leader of one people ask the leaders of

Yanks Down Nats, 6 to 3; Ruth Is Hero

Babe Drives in Four Runs, Slams 699th Homer; Manush Hits Two.

By Lewis F. Atcheson
(Post Staff Correspondent).

Yankee Stadium, New York, N. Y., July 8.—My friends, it is sad to report that the Washington ball club is just one more game out of first place, just that much more deeply engulfed in the mire of second division, and about to depart on its second tour of the provinces with as much chance of regaining the lost ground as a Republican in the Fifth Ward.

All this is the direct result of the team's four-day stand in Col. Jake Ruppert's ball yard, which ended today with the Yankees winning the final game, 6-3, and the series, 3-1.

The Yanks won despite the presence of the Nat's own private braintruster, Monte Weaver, in the pitcher's box, two home runs by the league's leading batsman, Heinrich Manush, two pinch hitters, as many more relief hurlers and nine solid base hits.

Fall in the Pinches.

But our side did not get its hits when they counted. For instance, the sacks were as bare as Lady Godiva when Manush poled those homers, his only hits in five tries. We made three hits in the seventh and got only one run for the trouble, and ditto for the eighth. The old punch wasn't available when needed.

One of the reasons the old punch was missing is Jimmy DeShong, of Harrisburg, Pa., formerly a chattle of the A's and more recently a product of the Yanks' country estate over in Newark. True, Jimmy gave up all the hits we got, but he really was in no danger at any Peruvian Charge Suicide as Divace Impends.

Paris, July 8 (AP).—Manuel Garcia Irigoyen, Peruvian Charge d'Affaires at Brussels, leaped down an elevator shaft to his death today after shooting and wounding his wife and sister-in-law.

Police said that divorce proceedings between the Irigoyens were under way.

Wife Slayer Suspect Eludes Vermont Posse

Wheelock, Vt., July 8 (AP).—Harley Sherburn, alleged wife-slayer, was still at large tonight, using his knowledge of the mountains to elude more than 300 men searching the green slopes for him.

Catholics Ask Reconciliation With Nazi Rule

Cardinal Warns, However, Church Will Make No Concessions.

Bamberg, Germany, July 8 (AP).—Apparently encouraged by recent political events, Germany's indomitable Catholic cardinal, Michael Faulhaber, today made the first public move for a Nazi-Catholic reconciliation, but indicated that no concessions could be expected from the Catholic side.

The cardinal's appearance here at a jubilee celebration in honor of the fiftieth annversary of the ordination of Archbishop Jacobus von Hauck dispelled all doubt as to his freedom of movement.

It had been reported and denied that he was under guard after the "purge" which cost so many lives in high places last week-end.

"No one welcomes a demand from a high official source for simplicity and cleanliness more than the Catholic Church," said the cardinal, referring to the new instructions to Nazis. "None will coperate more readily."

60,000 Take Part.

After the "purge" Nazi officials warned Storm Troop leaders that their lives must be simple and above reproach.

The cardinal's appearance was a signal for an impressive demonstration of solidarty by the Romann Catholic clergy of Bavaria and at least 60,000 parishioners.

From the cathedral heights the the pontofical mass was celebated. Overflow services were held in all churches, and in the cardinal's processions were representatives of all houses of the old Franconian nobility. Prominent also among them was Prince Fredrich Chrisitan, heir to the throne of Saxony.

The Reichswehr (regular army) sent a delegation to the celebration.

A hush fell upon the multitude when the cardinal by inference touched upon the current church strife.

"No one knows how the church is being traduced," he said.

British Motor Racer To Test Kaye Don Car

Middlesborough, Eng., July 8 (AP). Freddy Dixon, British racing motorist, hopes to take Kaye Don's reconstructed "Silver Bullet" to Daytona Beach within the next 12 months, he said today, and try to beat Sir Malcolm Campbell's record of 272.108 miles an hour.

Dixon is of the opinion that Don's car never performed at more than one-third its true capacity.

Sheriff's Wink Traps Captors

Friend Becomes Suspicious and Deputy Son Runs Down Kidnapers.

Waldron, Kans., July 8 (AP).—A sheriff's wink delivered him from kidnapers today and resulted in the capture of his abductors.

Sheriff P. A. Dickerson was seized when he answered a telephone, informing him an elevator and railroad station had been robbed at Frederick, Kans. The two kidnapers sped with him south toward Oklahoma, passing the Lyons Kans., filling station of Herman Swick, a friend. Swick was suspicious that a stranger was driving Dickerson's motor car and Dickerson did not speak.

"I thought it kind of funny because we were well acquainted," Swick said. "Then as the car drove away I saw the sheriff wink at me."

Swick notified Dwight Dickerson, undersheriff and son of the sheriff. The men were captured in Oklahoma after a six-hour chase. The captured men, taken to Hutchinson, Kans., refused to give their names except for a growl by one that his name was "Dillinger."

Bullets Again Spray Amsterdam Street

Soldiers and Police Fire on Radical Rioters.

Amsterdam, July 8 (AP).—Bullets spattered in the streets Amsterdam again tonight as soldiers and police made adetermined effort to uppress a new riot of Communists and unemployed.

Many were injured as officers charged two street barricades in the Witenberg district. From the housetops many of the rioters stoned the police and soldiers, and officers replied with several volleys of rifle fire.

In the Jordamm section of the town, where two bridges were burned last week, military engineers forestalled an effort of a mob to burn a church. No disorders were reported in other sections of Holland, but in several communities soldiers were in readiness for eventualities.

Fear of France Believed Cause Of GermanPlea

man government is now ready to go much further in its conciliatory attitude toward France.

The Reichswehr (regular army), it is known here, dreads nothing so much as a conflict with France, as it is admitted that the French forces are superior.

The army, therefore, viewed with alarm earlier utterances of Nazi Hotspurs, especially among the Storm Troop leaders, to the effect that Germany could lick France.

Wants French Agreement.

Hess' speech indicates that Hitler supports the view of the Reichswehr that nothing must be left undone to come to an agreement with France.

Deep distrust of the ultimate aims of France and Russia in promoting an "eastern locarno" was expressed, meanwhile, in an editorial in the Berliner Tagblatt, which was understood to have been written under direct inspiration of the German foreign office.

Apprehension was expressed that any eastern embroilment would inevitably involve western Europe and turn Germany into a battlefield.

"No one can doubt," said the editorial, "that the danger of war in Europe has become imminent.

"Germany has no use for collective nonaggression pacts which are simply vast graves of confidence, but she is ready to enter into bilateral agreements.

"Dangerous Illusions."

"We can not predict the future, but changes that have occurred in Europe since the western Locarno are warning us not to join any combination that would oblige us to stake our whole National existence upon uncontrollable circumstances."

Both the eastern Locarno and the proposed Soviet "permanent peace conference" are characterized as "dangerous illusions."

"The United States has declined pacts with the Soviets and with Japan," the editorial continues (referring to a report which has been denied). "What can be the reason except America's aversion to such abstract notions?"

The article expressed the hope that England will not hearken to Minister Barthou's "blandishments."

"England has her hand on the controls, may she pull them at the right time," the editorial concluded.

Conner's Stand On Liquor Hit

Mississippi Wet Leader Accuses Governor of Beclouding Issue.

Nelson Trimble Levings, leader of Mississippi's wet organizations, yesterday issued a statement in which he said that Gov. Conner of Mississippi stood "in the way of a sane and practical handling of our liquor problem," the Associated Press reports.

Mississippi voters will decide tomorrow whether to ratify a liquor control la wset up by the Legislature. A majority of the voters in the State at large must favor the legislation to make it effective.

The assertion that the Mississippi Governor had "set himself up as a supreme autocrat" was made by Levings, who added that Gov. Conner has tried to confuse the voters on the issue.

"Gov. Conner," Levings said, "talked about bringing liquor back to the State as if this were the issue. He knows that more liquor is drunk in Mississippi today than ever in its history. The issue is whether the people of Mississippi want some semblance of control and whether they want a revenue of about $2,500,000 annually, which repeal of the State laws would bring."

Constitution Held Safeguard Against Nazi-Like Regime

Valley Forge, Pa., July 8 (AP).—An appeal for closer adherence to the Constitution in the government of the country was made today by Representative Joseph B. Shannon (Democrat), Missouri, in an address at the celebration of Missouri Sunday in Washington Memorial Chapel.

Deploring recent summary executions of political enemies in Germany, Shannon cited the Constitution as a safeguard for American life and liberty and said it was written to correct centuries of misgovernment in Europe.

"The arch enemy of America," Shannon said, "is the man who, acting for the people, takes away any of the constitutional rights of the people.

"The Constitution provides a way to amend its provisions. It was never intended that these should be set aside by mere legislative acts or by manifestoes of the chief executives."

He intends to make Augusta his home and is going to work, he says.

other peoples: Must this be? Can we not by mutual good will spare humanity another war?"

Hess then explained why he (and thereby the Nazi regime) hitherto had not supported pleas for international understanding.

Without mentioning names he apparently referred to former Chancellor Bruening's radio appeal to French Premier Laval in 1931 among other events of pre-Hitler days.

Praises Hitler.

Probably also he had in mind the charges that the slain former Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher had dealt with a "foreign power."

"I will tell you why," said Hess. "Because my voice would have joined voices of traitors to our people, the voices of those who sacrificed the honor of our nation, whose conscience, as far as Germany is concerned, rests on the Versailles Treaty.

"Today I may speak because a man of my nation has rehabilitated Germany's honor before the world, because this man silenced the voices of traitors, because the whole world knows the National Socialist fighter is no coward.

"Today I may speak because the leader of my people himself stretches out the hand of peace to the world.

"Today I must speak because I thereby am supporting the man who is trying at the last minute to avert a catastrophe."

Defies Invasion.

Hess then became defiant.

"I raise my voice, also, however," he said, "because I want to warn the world against mistaking the Germany of today, the Germany of peace, for the Germany of yesterday, the Germany of pacifism.

"Let this be remembered: Despite our memories of the terrors of war, despite the fact that the younger generation wants war as little as does the older, the way is not open for a 'stroll' into our country.

"Just as the French people during the war defended every handful of native soil with all their power and would do so again in case of need, just so we Germans would defend ours today.

"The French trench soldier will especially understand us if we say to those who play with the idea of war: 'Just you dare attack us! Just you dare to march into Germany!'

Compliment to French.

"The world would then learn to feel the spirit of new Germany, it would fight as no people ever yet fought for liberty.

"The French people know how one defends one's own soil! Every bit of forest, every hillock, every farmstead would have to be counted with blood.

"Old and young would dig themselves into their native soil to defent it. With unparalleled fanaticism they would oppose the attempt."

Hess then paid a compliment—rare from Nazi lips—to the French.

"We don't believe that any people want to disturb the peace of Germany and thereby the peace of Europe," he said. "We especially are unwilling to believe it of the French people.

"We know this people, too, longs for peace. We trench fighters remember France's population behind the lines always regarded the war as a misfortune for itself and for the world.

"Honest sympathy has greeted the utterances of French organizations of war veterans demanding an honest understanding with Germany.

"France's soldiers know how bravely Germans fought for four and a half years.

Cites World Desire for Peace.

"The front fighters want peace. The peoples want peace. Germany's government wants peace."

With an evident effort to placate French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, now in England, Hess then said:

"One may share the conviction that M. Barthou also desires peace despite various turns in his speeches that sound cacophonious to the ears of people ready for an understanding.

"For Barthou is a man who combines political foresightedness with personal culture, yet who states proudly he admires Richard Wagner and his works.

"It is not without intention, probably, that at Geneva he emphasized that he knows German intellectual and spiritual life thoroughly.

"It is therefore not impossible that he might in the last analysis take German conditions into account and this decisively in the pacification of Europe.

Stresses Benefits.

"There is no doubt but that a boon would come from an understanding between Germany and France not only to these states in their entirety but to each individual of these two peoples.

"To put it concretely, every Frenchman and German would have a better income. Real peace, real confidence between people makes possible reduction of armaments which today swallow a great part of the incomes of nations and thereby of the individual citizens."

Hess expressed the opinion that once equality of armaments was vouchsafed, Germany "would be more easily satisfied with a minimum armament for security as a guarantee of peace."

A defenseless country, he claimed, represents a danger to peace in that foreign armies in an attempt to avert troubles at home might be tempted to invade a defenseless country.

Appeals for Pacts.

Shortly before closing his address, Hess paid tribute to Germany's new friend, Poland, by saying "on Germany's eastern frontier sensible pacts have guaranteed the peace of the inhabitants of a great neighbor state.

"May the governments of other peoples and the other frontiers of the Reich also soon see a greater security for the people through peaceful pacts of understanding rather than in heaped-up war materials. That is our hope."

Earlier in the speech Hess extolled Chancellor Hitler's speed in suppressing the incipient Storm Troop revolt. Not all who were executed were personally guilty, the chancellor's deputy said.

"I am willing to believe," he asserted, "that one or another of those implicated was guilty only because of the tragic combination of circumstances. In those hours, when it was a question of being or not being for the German nation, the degree of guilt of an individual could not be a matter for dispute.

Civil War Menace.

"Despite such severity, there is a deep significance in the practice, hitherto the vogue, of punishing mutiny among soldiers by riddling with bullets every tenth man without asking whether he is guilty or not."

Hess drew a graphic picture of Hitler's actions on the night of June 29 and praised him as one of Germany's greatest heroes of all time.

Hess appeared in the brown uniform of the Storm Troopers—materially fallen from the high position it once held—and in his brief introductory remarks to his audience of 12,000 said that the execution of rebel leaders was "essential to avoid civil war which would have brought bolshevism and its attendant miseries to Germany."

"The Dutch Communist disturbances show," he said, "that although foreign politicians do not love the German regime they have cause to be grateful to it for the eradication of the bolshevist menace here.

"Many could not understand why the fuehrer had not struck earlier, but events have shown he knew his mind, that he was right."

288,000 Aided In Repairs on Homes by U.S.

HOLC Report Sets Total at $55,000,000 With More Available.

More than 288,000 American home owners in financial difficulty have applied for reconditioning loans through the Home Owners Loan Corporation, it was announced yesterday.

The amount involved exceeds $55,000,000, an average of nearly $200 in reconditioning expenses for each home.

Seeing in this a desire of home owners to put their properties in sound condition, the corporation announced yesterday that as a result of recent amendments to the Home Owners' Loan act, $300,000,000 is now available for advances for maintenance and reconditioning. The corporation makes loans only to owners who are unable to obtain financing elsewhere.

Under direction of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, an entire reconditioning organization of architects and other technical specialists has been set up by regions, States and districts.

The purpose of the reconditioning division is to pass upon reconditioning loan applications, and to approve the bids and supervise the actual construction work, which will be carried out by private contractors.

Within recent weeks, an increasing proportion of applications for reconditioning loans has called for extensive remodeling projects rather than merely urgent repairs.

particularism, he said the Catholic clergy is rendering a great community service in the ministration to souls gone astray through suffering under the stress of the times.

Message to Priests.

"At confession, we teach children and prevent their seeking their own parents' graves through their errors," he said. "We have saved the honor and loyalty of many. We have told weary souls they must not commit suicide, and have revived hope in them."

Priests, he said, must "arise against the spirit of the times," adding that the Catholic Church has no place for clergymen seeking to profit by the popularity of present trends.

The concordat interpretation recenlty agreed on in Berlin was reliably stated here to have been forwarded to the Vatican with the approval of Catholics.

The Vatican, churchmen here said, is not expected to act at once "owing to the Pope's vacation."

In the course of the transmission of this dispatch to Berlin by telephone the Associated Press reporter was interrupted repeatedly by the operator and told to speak in German. Each time he remonstrated and was permitted to speak in English.

A. & P. League Stars Hurt In Game

Milana, Cole Break Ankle, Nose, Respectively, as Iona, Condor Win.

AN improved Iona team rallied gamely behind the sterling pitching of Johnson to defeat the Encore nine, 5 to 4, in a stunning upset in the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. League. Condor also came from behind to beat Bonday, 14 to 7, in the only other league game, due to the postponement of the Bokar-Rajah contest.

The surprising Iona victory was a rude jolt to Encore's hopes for Post Association honors, and puts the latter a game and a half behind the leading Bokar club.

Johnson Hurls Well.

In subduing the fast Encore outfit Johnson gave up only six hits, and was invincible during the latter innings of the game. Saunders and Stephens were the outstanding hitters.

The battle was marred by casualties on both sides. Milana, Iona right fielder, sustained a broken ankle sliding into first base, while Cole, Encore second sacker, had his nose broken when a pitched ball caromed off his bat and struck him in the face.

Mercury Ran Up to 80 and Quit; No Deaths.

Yesterday was the coolest day since July 12.

Cool breezes blew. The thermometer climbed as high as 80 at 1:30 p. m. then quit. There were no prostrations, no deaths that had even the most remote association with the weather.

And the Weather Bureau said there would be little, if any, change toda.

On only three days in June or July has moderation so characterized Capital weather, bureau records show. Each time the highest temperature was 80. The last of these was June 12.

place for world politicians, Basel, city of the International Bank, would become the world center for financiers under the plan.

An immensely useful field of activities recently was begun with the bank becoming the clearing house for interpostal payments between Germany and Switzerland, without the support of the Interpostal Union.

Great Bhitain will support and develop this plan, financiers said, and the bank may eventually arrange all the world's postal clearings.

It was learned, also, that plans are being fomulated to spread the system to intergovernmental telegraph payments and even to state railroads.

If a traveler buys a ticket from Budapest to New York or Argentina this inviolves multiple payments and adjustments.

Under the new plan, the bank for international settlements would take care of all this, and also perhaps would function in the domain of international air travel and air postal service.

Hitler Ignores War Veterans' Munich Parade

Munich, Germany, July 8 (AP).—Scarcely recovered from the bloody events of a week ago, Munich today was the scene of a brilliant cavalry parade.

Chancellor Hitler, Gen. Werner von Blomberg, Minister of Defense, and Franz von Papen, conservative vice chancellor and former cavalry officer whose position has been a delicate one since the Storm Troop revolt, were conspicuous by their absence.

Gen. Franz von Epp presided. The parade formed part of the annual two-day reunion of German World War cavalry veterans and was intended to accentuate comradeship between the old army and the new generation.

Veterans wearing the dashing uniforms of Imperial days and mounted on prancing steeds made the event, which took place in the Munich Stadium, a stirring one.

President von Hindenburg telegraphed greetings and expressed regret over his inability to attend.

Much comment was aroused by the fact that Chancellor Hitler apparently ignored the reunion, remaining at his Alpine retreat on the Obersalzberg.

Ahring was an employe of the General Land Office. An inquest was scheduled for July 16.

Lake 480 Miles Away Aids Parched Rice Area

Columbus, Tex., July 8 (AP).—Water from Lake Brownwood, 480 miles away, succored the drought-parched rice fields of this vicinity today.

The water, amounting to 14,000-acre feet, was released from the lake June 27 to flow down the Colorado River channel. The river rose more than 2 feet here, and pumps lifted it to the rice fields. Rice farmers paid $10,000 for the water.

Spain Rules Island Forts; Asks U. S. Aid

Work on Balearic Group to Cost $130,000,000; Program Sketched.

Madrid, July 8 (AP).—Spain is planning fortifications for the Balearic Islands in the Mediterranean Sea to cost 1,000,000,000 pesetas (about $130,000,000), it was learned today from a high official source.

The Spanish government has asked the United States for specifications on armaments and data on cost of big guns, antiaircraft artillery and coast deefnse equipment, it was ascertained.

It was said that officials are convinced that American arms and equipment of the type needed to make the islands impregnable are the best obtainable. Because of this conviction, it was said, Spain has made a study of American equipment, delving as deeply as possible without infringing on American Government secrets.

Although the Balearic Islands defense plans are a closely guarded military secret, it was learned the project is designed to encircle the three major islands, Mallorca, Minorca and Ibiza, with a chain of steel and stone fortifications of the most modern design. Defensive armaments, it was understood, will include disappearing and railway guns of the largest caliber in use anywhere. Spanish mills have had no experience constructing such weapons.

A fleet of swift, armored speedboats carrying quickfire and machine guns also is projected. The purpose of these little boats is to attack landing parties.

Data also is being sought from America on submarine nets, mines and torpedoes.

These warlike prepaartions in reality are peaceful protective measures, it is contended.

White Haven's Rally Trims Bethesda

Morris' Double in 9th Ends Outburst; Cabin John Scores Upset.

GEORGE MORRIS, White Haven center fielder, climaxed a stirring rally by his team yesterday when his double in the ninth inning scored George Robey with the run that beat Bethesda, 5 to 4, in the feature game of the Montgomery County League. Cabin John, displaying a potent batting punch, upset North Washington, 11 to 6, at Four Corners.

Yesterday's results leave White Haven and Cabin John sharing the leading position in the struggle for Post Association laurels, and a lively battle is anticipated next Sunday when these teams meet.

Bethesda, with H. Best hurling effectively, looked like the winner until White Haven's sudden outburst in the ninth. Creamer opened this round with a single, went to second on Pennyfield's sacrifice, and scored on George Robey's liner to left center. Robey in turn scampered across with the winning tally on Morris' double. Byron Williams, who collected four hits in as many times at bat, was responsible for White Haven's early scores. Zirkle, Parks, and Walter were outstanding for Bethesda.

Five Runs in Seventh.

A five-run onslaught in the seventh proved the downfall of North-Washington. The bats of Baver, Wire, Crown and D. Lynch were prominent in Cabin John's slugging victory.

Storm Drenches Maryland Militia

Fifth Regiment's Camp at Cascade Flooded.

Camp Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 8 (AP).—Drenched by one of the worst thunderstorms to hit this section this summer, members of the Fifth Regiment, Maryland National Guard, spent most of this morning drying out.

The storm struck the new tented area last night, turning the dusty company streets into quadmires. Lightning hit a transformer near the Fifty-eighth Brigade headquarters, placing the camp in darkness until 9:15 o'clock.

The whole regiment expressed thankfulness for the rain, nevertheless, as it settled the heavy dust which greeted the arrival in camp yesterday.

Bolivian Tennis Star To Fight in Chaco War

Denver, Colo., July 8 (AP).—Battles on the tennis courts must give way to serious warfare for Humberto Pena, a graduate of the University of Colorado.

Pena, a member of the university tennis team four years, said today he has been summoned to return to his native country, Bolivia, to fight in the Chaco War between Bolivian and Paraguay. He said his country has issued an official decree, calling upon her young men in foreign schools to come home and fight.

Illinois Starts Probe In Coal Mine Bombing

Springfield, Ill., July 8 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner today placed State investigation facilities at disposal of the Sangamon County sheriff's office in efforts to apprehend those responsible for the bombing late yesterday of the fan house at the Capitol Mine of the Peabody Coal Co.

There were about 360 miners below when the explosions occurred but the men were all hurriedly brought to the surface, uninjured.

broad principles laid down by Johnson, looking toward a division of authority among major staff executives.

The idea is definitely Johnson's own. One major official interpreted it as a sign that the general has no plans for resigning in the immediate future.

Nevertheless, if the board's work proves effective, Johnson could so relax his grip on NRA as to leave him free time for other work, particularly with regard to studying plans for the permanent formation of the Government's business laws and policy.

The plan ties in with the reports that the General is working out plans to present his ideas of how NRA and the Government's business agencies and functions may be made permanent.

As authoritatively reported from New York, during Johnson's visit there, these ideas look to further development of a plan for business self-government, with adequate Federal supervision.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Ill., said in a speech Saturday that the President was anxious to hear business criticisms, and to reassure business that no further "tightening" of existing regulatory measures was contemplated.

Code String Loosened.

Business leaders have been thinking about the permanent aspects of NRA from the beginning of its organization, and have discussed a variety of plans, based on the theory of business self-government. In the light of NRA experience, such plans necessarily envisage a continuation of some form of government supervision.

Already NRA has virtually banned general codes for service industries, and has relaxed its supervision of smaller industries. Many officials believe that NRA's attempt to fulfill the desires of some business men for extreme regulatory detail has failed, and that future regulation will be broad. This was said also to represent current business theories.

Recent reports that a commission ultimately would control NRA, and that NRA would absorb the Federal Trade Commission, major permanent arm of the Government for business regulation, were said by one reliable official to represent little more than the original conclusions reached even before NRA was formed. These conclusions were, first, that only a commission could operate as a permanent agency, and, second, that redefinitions or re-creation of the redefinitions or sion was implicit in a permanent organization.

One-Man Plan Faster.

NRA was conceived as an emergency agency, and as such was believed to require the domination of one man. For one thing, a commission would tend to be slower. Permanently and for the longer term definition of policy, the broader views of a commission were held to be essential.

Two important officials yesterday expressed doubt that even Johnson had presented any detailed permanent plans to the President. It was said that all affected officials have been instructed to get to work on the problem, but anything done up to now was to be considered highly tentative.

The basic problem still is determination of policy of how business should govern itself. That determination awaits not only Presidential decision but Congressional action—and there is plenty of disagreement both among officials and in Congress.

spokesmen "are confessing the crimes of those for whom they have been advocates for 20 years."

Pointing out that votes of both major political parties suspended the antitrust laws at the request of American business, Lewis said:

"Instead of keeping faith with the Government, certain manufacturing and financial establishments, conscious that the trust law was suspended, promptly joined with each other to fix the price of everything—even as against the Government itself.

"It will not be forgotten that the head of the railroad coordination denounced certain steel interests. Later the Government was compelled again to denounce building interests and financial institutions for joining with each other to lift the prices to everything, cheat the Government and rob the public.

Not to Allow Offenses.

"This present Administration, aided by Democrats and Republican, in fact, by every political, honest adjunct, will not allow this offense, in righteousness to a free Government, longer to endure."

Attorney General Cummings, declining to comment upon the Administration spokesman's prediction of Justice Department action, was understood to consider that action is not imminent in any "major case," according to the Associated Press. The Justice Department was described in authoritative circles as being "constantly at work on problems of that sort."

Regarding Borah's attack upon "bureaucracy," Lewis said:

"Senator Borah, Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee and other Republican leaders joining with certain of the Democrats are holding just ground in their assaults upon the institutions which were created under administrations called Republican and too long adhered to under administrations called Democratic.

"When the present Administration came in, it had to carry on the Government. The effort to abolish the old political bureaus and place in their stead bureaus of efficiency could not be completed within one year, when 20 had been consumed in building up the former bureau."

made this morning. The President, accompanied by Gov. Pearson, motored across the island from Frederiksted to Christiansted, where the Houston was awaiting him.

Pleased at Progress.

As he lef tthe V irgin Islands, the President remarked to newspapermen thta the Government's program seemed to b e going on "in good fashion." He reached this conclusion after studying the Government home-making project. He seemed to be pleased by the progress being made by the people.

The Chief Executive was received enthusiastically.

On St. Croix, some factions staged a demonstration against Gov. Pearson. They displayed banners on which was the legend:

Part of Family.

In a short address at Christiansted the President asked Virgin Islanders to think of themselves as an essential part of the United States.

"I want you to remember, today more than ever, that the people of Continental United States remember and realize that you are also a part of the American family," he sail.

Last night at St. Thomas, the President entertained Gov. Pearson, udge Wilson and other governmental officials at dinner aboard the Houston. He recalled that Alexander Hamilton was born near the port.

President Pays Visit To Lepers at St. Croix

St. Croix, Virgin Islands, July 8 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt was given a warm reception here today on a visit to the leper colony.

He inspected the accommodations and equipment for treatment of the disease.

The visit was a high light on a busy day which included observance of a demonstration of the native colored residents against Gov. Paul Pearson.

The President at a reception explained his Administration was going forward with plans to make the Virgin Islanders self-sustaining. He inspected their home projects in a 17-mile drive across the island and took intense interest in what was being done to restore prosperity in the islands, which lost most of their revenues during prohibition. Rum is a main export.

After inspecting the leper colony, the party visited abandoned sugar mills.

The Bornn Distilling Co. and the A. H. Riise Co. each reserved the first cask of postprohibition rum distilled here and presented them to the President. It was expected they would be taken back to the White House.

the words "gone but not forgotten."

The action of the teamsters came as the President's new labor disputes board was preparing to open a series of public meetings here tomorrow with the intention of formulating a definite set of recommendations for Presidential action in the longshoremen's strike.

Guardsmen maintained their vigil on the water front today, but here, as in other ports, there were no disturbing signs as the long walkout came to the eve of its third month.

Minneapolis Drivers Serve Strike Notice

Minneapolis, July 8 (U.P.).—"To hell with the labor board!"

That was the answer given to the St. Paul-Minneapolis Regional Labor Board tonight by William Brown, head of the drivers' union.

"We are going to strike," said Brown, "and we'll have every union man in the twin cities with us."

Brown called a mass meeting of drivers and helpers for 8 p. m., Wednesday to conduct a strike vote. He said leaders of other unions would meet at the same time to consider the general strike demand.

The blunt announcement that the strike wohld be called cahght most hnion officials dnprepared for comment, althodgh the drivers' union in St. Paul said its membership would "cooperate" with the Minneapolis local.

A general strike, if effective, would seriously affect commerce and industry in the Northwest, of which Minneapolis and St. Paul are the hub. Shipment of food and feedstuffs would be paralyzed.

The strike threat gre wout of the drivers' union contention that trucking companies had failed to live up to an agreement which resulted in a settlement of the union's strike here in May.

Bloody rioting in the city's market places, during which two policemen were killed and 300 persons injured, occurred during the 10-day strike of drivers last May.

Back of the feud smouldered the "closed shop" issue, with labor leaders attempting to force 100 per cent unionization on all 160 employers who signed the settlement pact in May.

compete with Washington filling stations, is banned.

Vigorous protests and threats to defy the price-boosting order or close their stations were voiced last night by many dealers in nearby Virginia, who said if they are forced to charge an additional cent a gallon their business would be ruined. A protest meeting has been called for tonight in Clarendon, at which dealers will formulate a program of action against the increase.

Maryland dealers likewise are opposed to the increase but are postponing formal action until after discusions at their convention this week in Ocean City, Md. The problem in Maryland is ont so acute as District gas prices will prevail as far north as eBthesda in Montgomery County and to Beltsville in Prince Georges. This is due to the fact that Maryland's gas tax is but 4 cents, while Virginia has a 5-cent levy.

Many May Close Down.

Speaking for gasoline dealers in northern Virginia, F. E. Dove, president of the Northern Virginia Gasoline Association, said last night, "we can't compete with Washington dealers if this price increase goes through. I know that many dealers will have to close down, throwing several hundred men out of work."

Some dealers in nearby Virginia have stocked up to the capacity of their tanks and declared they would ccntinue to meet District prices so long as their supply lasted. This, however, can not be more than a few days. Others planned open defiance of the order, although oil wholesalers are understood to be under orders not to sell to any dealer so acting.

Between 50 and 60 dealers, selling from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 gallons of gas yearly, are affected by the situation inVirginia. In Maryland about 60 stations, selling almost a similar quantity of gas, would be embraced within the higher price zone.

The present situation is but the latest incident in a long series of developments arising out of the fact that Washington's gas rate is but 2 cents compared with 5 in Virginia and 4 in Maryland. Dealers near Washington in Virginia and Maryland have long sought unsuccessfully to obtain equality with District dealers.

Stratosphere Fliers Await Good Weather

Favorable Tests Saturday Forecast Success of Adventure.

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 2 (AP).—Jubilant confidence in the outcome of the stratosphere adventure permeated the camp of the expedition today.

Happy in yesterday's tests, which put the stamp of scientific approval on their days of methodical preparation, the crew of the flight needed only the weather's cooperation to strike ou for the goal—the highest altitude ever reached by man.

The favorable reaction to the tests Saturday prompted directors of the Joint National Geographic-Army Air Corps undertaking to decide tentatively the take-off would be about 5 a. m. on the day chosen for the hop.

Just when that day will be depends on the weather. It may come as early as Wednesday—it may be delayed for days.

Tomorrow will be given over to christening the huge gas bag, the largest ever constructed.

All scientific instruments were in place in the air-tight metal gondola. The pilot, Maj. William E. Kepner; Capt. Albert Stevens, scientific observer, and Capt. Orvill Anderson, alternate pilot, will take with them flying suits and electrically heated gloves. Their equipment also will include two cans of beans for each, some hardtack and bouillon. They do not expect to eat during the flight but, Capt. Stevens said, plan to take the food only for an emergency.

Scientists have estimated the balloon, which will take four hours going up, four hours at the "ceiling" or 15-mile level and four hours coming down, will drift about 700 miles southeast of here.

The impending flight will mark the first time such a heavy load of instruments—about 1 ton—has been assembled for a stratosphere flight, designed to widen man's knowledge of altitude, air pressure, sky and sun brightness and, most important of all, cosmic rays, now prevented by an "air blanket" from reaching the earth with their full power.

Capt. Stevens said today he expected the trip to be followed by another and probably a third before the year is out.

The second projected flight, he explained would take place before October.

Medica Takes Third A. A. U. Tank Title

Wins 880-Yard Free Style Easily; Detroit Adds Team Trophy.

CHICAGO, July 8 (AP).—Husky Jack Medica, Uncle Sam's premier distance swimmer, stroked to his third 1934 National A. A. U. title today, and but for a new rule, might have had another, as the Detroit Athletic Club gained the team championship.

The 880-yard free style was just another Medica exhibition today, as he pulled away to lead Herbert Barthels, of the Los Angeles A. C., home by a good 25 yards. The 19-year-old University of Washington sophomore, who swims for the Washington A. C., of Seattle, shot into the lead at the gun and quickly went about the business of building up his long lead. The battle for second place between Barthels and a teammate, Robert Boals, was a dandy, with the former touching the finish a split second ahead.

Medica failed once more to set a new record. He covered the half mile in 10:61.1, seven-tenths of a second clower than his own world standard. He was entered in the 220-yard free style, but a new A. A. U. rule, which limits individuals to three events, kept him from trying for a fourth title.

Scores 29 Points.

The eDtroit Club scored 29 points to win the team trophy, with the Lake Shore A. C. and the Los Angeles A. C. tied for second place 10 points behind. Medica scored 15 points, enough to give the Washington A. C. fourth position.

Medica's achievements included the only world record of the meet. On the first day he swam 1 mile in 20:57.8, to clip 9 seconds off the world standard created by Arne Bork, of Sweden, in 1924, and score a one-sidd victory over his chief rival, Ralph Flanagan, of Miami. Yesterday, the triple winner scored easily in the 440-yard swim, and gained credit for a new American long course record by finishing in 4:50.9.

Woman Is Sought In Jewel Robbery

Police Believe Girl Helped Gang Get $250,000.

Gloucester, Mass., July 8 (AP).—"Find the woman," the favorite slogan for solving fictoin mysteries, was the watchword of authorities today investigating the $250,000 jewel robbery in Magnolia Friday.

Police Inspectors J. Russell Moody and J—. Herny Burgess disclosed that one of the major efforts of authorities was to find an attractive young woman known as Miss Helen Reed, alias Marian Brazier and Marion Brabazon.

This young woman, the inspectors said, may have been the "finger girl" who obtained the necessary advance information and who directed the five bandits in looting the branch store of the Boston firm of Hodgson, Kennard & Co.

Amsterdam Quiet Under Police Rule

Worker Is Killed in Clash With Armed Guards.

Amsterdam, Holland, July 8 (U.P.).—Sunday brought a sullen truce to the battle-scarred workers' sections in which 6 have been killed and 30 seriously wounded in riots against reduction of relief payments.

The workers' apartments resembled a war front, with military units and armed police patrolling zones where a new outbreak was feared. Order was maintained after a clash in which one man was killed and another wounded. The workers, cowed but resentful, retreated into their apartments.

Rioting was reported spreading to other cities, and possibility of violence in Rotterdam was seen. Disturbances were reported increasing in Hilversum and Groningen.

Nebraska Boys Learn to Fish In High School

Course Started as Part of Leisure Time Education.

Albion, Nebr. (U.P.).—Extension of high school courses to include training in hunting and fishing, a unique experiment in educational background for employment of leisure under the new social order, has been accomplished here by Bilse C. J. Robinson, principal of Albion High School.

Notoriously adverse to educational experiments, citizens of this town, located in the midst of Nebraska prairie, are watching with curiosity, skeptical of the advisability of any deviation from the three "R's."

Not only the tax-paying citizens, however, are interested in the innovation.

Tried Out on Adults.

Educational leaders are observing its results, speculating on the success of any course in pure recreation. Conservation and game organizations and officials in the State have sought information from the high-school principal, interested in the possibilities of training future citizens in the virtues of preservation of Nebraska natural resources.

The high-school course was developed by Robinson as the outgrowth of an adult educational series conducted by his faculty.

His initial presentation of classes in hunting and fishing was so well received by adults attending the night classes that he was encouraged to introduce it as a regular section of the high-school curriculum.

Topics For Study.

The high-school principal declares that for the best results, such a course should include these subjects: The shotgun, wing shooting, ammunition, the rifle, pistols, revolvers and automatics, bait casting, fly casting, fish and their habits, camping and outing game laws.

While adults debate the relative merits and demerits of the idea, Albion youths registered in the high school have already made up their minds. They think the idea is a grand one.

Spider Peril Seen in West

Warning Issued Following Deadly Bites; Mild Winter Blamed.

Sacramento, Calif. (U.P.).—Reports of extraordinarily large numbers of venomous black widow spiders have resulted in public health departments throughout the West issuing warnings to be on the alert.

Numerous cases of black widow spider bites have been reported and a few deaths have occurred. A mild winter and dry weather were conducive to development of the poisonous species.

The black widow, so named because the female of the species devours her mate, has a large, round, shiny black body resembling a shoe button. The long, sprawling legs may spread two inches.

The most distinguishing mark is a red spot, somewhat in the shape of an hour glass, on the underside of the body.

Poisons are not effective in ridding sections of the pest, but spraying crude oil or creosote into cracks and crevices is considered a helpful control procedure.

When a person is bitten by a black widow, acute pain develops almost immediately in the region of the bite, and spreads to other parts of the body. Accompanying the pain there may be muscular contraction, difficut breathing, cold perspiration, nausea and an extreme rigidity of the abdomen.

Fatalities are not common, but when death does occur, it usually comes swiftly—within 32 hours after the bite.

Day School Succeeds In Wisconsin Prison

Waupun, Wis. (U.P.).—Nearly 400 inmates of the Wisconsin State Prison here have been attending day school for a year and the project has been pronounced a success.

The school is under direction of John Faville, jr., resident director of education. Most of the teachers are prisoners convicted of some form of robbery. No formal course of study is followed. The students are divided into class groups ranging from illiterates to junior high school.

Farmer's War Collection Includes Stone Weapons

Beaver Dam, Wis. (U.P.).—Weapons of war ranging from Indian arrowheads to Geman machine guns have been collected over a period of many years by August Smith, Beaver Dam, a retired farmer and former member of the Wisconsin National Guard.

He has more than 3,000 arrowheads in his collection in addition to 300 stone hammers and axes and about 300 guns. His collection includes the rifle with which Sitting Bull is supposed to have been killed.

Nation Shows Increase In Scientific Interest

Berkeley, Calif. (U.P.).—The depression apparently has whetted America's appetite for scentific knowledge, according to Ansel Franklin Hall, director of a scientific expedition in the Southwest.

Hall said scores of inquiries from laymen greeted his announcement of plans for the geological and biological expedition into northern Arizona and southern Utah. The group plans to conduct extensive research in Grand Canyon's deepest gorges.

Meeting Is Set for Tuesday to Study State Resources and Economic Needs for Ten-Year Program.

Baltimore, July 8 (Spl.).—Plans for formulating a 10-year program of public works for Maryland and for studying the resources and social problems of the State will be discussed Tuesday at a meeting of bureau heads and members of the State planning commission here. The meeting will be held in the offices of Abel Wolman, chairman of the planning commission.

PWA Provides 544,000 Jobs

June 23 Figures Nearly Double Those for Last March 10.

Employment on construction sites under the PWA totaled 544,000 as of June 23, and is rapidly nearing the summer peak, Secretary Ickes, the Public Works administrator, announced yesterday.

This employment figure is more than double the 244,000 working the week of March 10, when the winter low point was reached. The PWA estimates that for every man employed on construction sites two others are employed indirectly in production, processing and transporting raw material.

The 544,000 total does not include the men enlisted in the Civilian Conservation Corps, nor men and women employed in administrative relief agencies of NRA, PWA and CWA, although they are paid out of the public works appropriation.

Employes on the Federal projects being financed by PWA grants and on the Tennessee Valley Authority work are included in the PWA figure.

Ickes would not predict when the peak will be reached in summer employment, but said it is inevitable that a gradual letdown will occur during the fall and winter.

Silver Run Church Has 40th 'Birthday'

Westminster, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—The fortieth anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of St. Mary's Lutheran Church, Silver Run, was observed today.

The Rev. A. R. Wentz, of Gettysburg, Pa., delivered the anniversary sermon. The Rev. H. D. Hoover, of Gettysburg, gave the principal address at the evening service. Former pastors were honored at a special observance during the afternoon.

Organized in 1762, the first church, built of logs was erected at Silver Run. The cornerstone of the present church was laid on July 8, 1894. Two members of the building committee of the present edifice, William Masonheimer and Wesley Humbert, are still living. In addition to today's services, a fellowship night will be observed tomorrow, when pastors of all churches in the Silver Run community have been invited to participate in a special program.

PGinners' Pact To Be Dropped

U. S. Farm Officials Lose Hope for Marketing Agreement.

The Farm Administration is preparing to abandon the proposed marketing agreement for cotton ginners, the Associated Press reports.

Repeated conferences have failed to budge the ginners in their demands for minima for ginning deemed too high by Administration officials.

Considering further negotiations fruitless, the Administration has decided to drop the matter entirely, leaving the ginners without an agreement of any sort.

A dozen hearings, seeking the view of growers and operators on the proposed agreement, held throughout the cotton belt, were completed recently.

Gin men have been holding out for provisions in the agreement guaranteeing them a return amounting at least to what they consider cost. Farm Administration officials disputed that demand, contending the farmer gets no guarantee of cost of production for his products.

Racing Drivers Face Fuel Cut On Speedway

Work on Gasoline Saving Devices Pending Rule at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind. (U.P.).—Faced with a probable further reduction in gasoline supply for the 1935 Indianapolis Speedway race, drivers and mechanics have turned to their garages to develop more fuel-saving devices.

Col. E. V. Rickenbacker, president of the Indianapolis Speedway Corporation, has indicated that another slash will be made in the fuel supply before the 1935 classic is run.

This year the Speedway contestants were limited to 45 gallons for the 500-mile grind, and three gallons for the 25-mile qualification run.

Study Change in July.

Highly pleased with this year's fuel experiment, Col. Rickenbacker has indicated that the National technical committee of the American Automobile Association will consider data on the proposed fuel allowance cut at its meeting in Detroit in July.

The automobile owners of the country likely will save thousands of dollars in gasoline bills as a result of fuel-saving devices and improved gasolines developed as a result of this year's fuel consumption limit.

Automotive engineers hope that further reductions can be made in 1935, and experiments to be made in Detroit will determine whether an attempt to cut the gasoline allowance will be made.

Track Record Set.

Thirty-three cars started in this year's race, and 12 finished. None of the cars was forced out by a shortage of fuel.

Among the first ten finishers, the minimum gas consumption was 33¾ gallons, while the maximum was 43 gallons. Despite the fuel consumption limit which was inaugurated this year, "Wild Bill" Cummings set a new track record of 104.863 miles per hour, bettering Lou Meyer's 1933 mark of 104.162.

When the gasoline limitation was announced, its critics pointed out that it would slow the race. The ruling, however, produced a new record and one of the most thrilling, evenly matched and safest races ever held on the Indianapolis bricks.

Pasadena Bills Famous Bands At 25 Cents

Civic Auditorium Dances Solve Problem of Serving Youth.

Pasadena, Calif., (U.P.).—Dance for a quarter to the strains of bands of Gus Arnheim, Ben Bernie, Ted Lewis and Ted Fiorito—that's the answer Pasadena citizens have made to a sociological problem.

Each week-end since the war civic dances have been given, first on the tennis courts of the Tournament of Roses Park and for the past two years in the huge civic auditorium.

And do the boys and girls—and yes, their elders—enjoy it? A throng of 7,000 persons, believed a world record, attended a dance last winter at which Arnheim was the attraction.

The Community Dance Association has sponsored the hops each Friday and Saturday night. Mrs. William Bennet Munro, whose husband is an economist at California Institute of Technology, is chairman of the group and never misses a dance.

The dances serve primarily to give the high school youngsters an attraction to keep them off the streets. But best of all, they can dance to the best bands of the country for 25 cents.

The youths are neat and orderly. Coats and ties must be worn. If the boys fail to wear them they are provided by the management. No dirty, collegiate cords nor leather coats are permitted.

The dances are nonprofit affairs and usually are just that. Where a large "name" band will fail to meet expenses, a smaller band costing less, will take up the difference. Indeed, for the first three months of 1934, the dance had shown a profit of only $23, after paying $75 rent each night to the city. The city also shares in half the profits to pay off the bonded indebtedness of the structure, which is large enough to hold a football game.

Demand Increases For Farm Horses

12,000 From West Ready for Market.

Chicago (U.P.).—A steadily increasing demand for horses for work on farms and ranches in the West and Northwest is given by Chappel Brothers Co. here as the reason for the contemplated sale of 12,000 head from the herds in South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana.

Farmers are turning more and more to horses again for economical reasons, according to Earl J. Chappel, treasurer of the firm. He cited as specific causes the small investment and lack of depreciation as compared to that involved in machines used for the same work.

Operators of farms, he pointed out, have discovered now that they can buy three-year-old horses, work them two years and still sell them at a price equal to or more than the original price.

Cat "Lost" 38 Miles Away Gets Home First

Bucyrus, Ohio. (U.P.).—Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Higgins fed the stray, yellow cat which came meowing to their doorstep and adopted their house as its home, but they didn't want the animal.

On a trip to Cleveland they took it in their car 38 miles north, setting it down near a culvert at Monroeville. Two days later the doctor and wife returned to their home. Curled up at their back door was the stray, yellow cat.

50 Policemen Offer Blood to Save Life Of Confrere's Child

Baltimore, July 8 (Spl.).—Fifty policemen volunteered to give their blood today in an effort to save the life of the daughter of a member of the force.

The girl is Dorothy Cernik, 10, daughter of Patrolman George Cernik. On June 29, while playing with companions, Dorothy was accidentally kicked on the leg. She made no mention of the injury until the next day, when she told her mother.

Home remedies were applied, but the injury developed into blood poisoning. She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where her condition grew steadily worse. Yesterday an appeal for blood for a transfusion was made by radio, and 50 policemen immediately volunteered.

The transfusion probably will be made tomorrow.

Son Offers $200 For Finding Body

Baltimorean Fears Mother Jumped Into Bay.

Baltimore, July 8 (AP).—A reward of $200 was offered tonight by James D. Blum, of Baltimore, for the recovery of the body of a woman, believed to be his mother, Mrs. Celia Blum, who disappeared from a bay steamer en route to Norfolk, Va., Friday night.

After a conference with Capt. Charles Brooks, master of the steamer, City of Baltimore, Blum said he was convinced that the missing woman, who registered on the boat as Mrs. C. Block, was his mother. He said his mother had been despondent since the death of his father, Harry M. Blum, in March.

Members of the steamer's crew said they heard a splash, as if a barrel had fallen overboard, Friday about 10 p. m. It was estimated the boat was between Sharps Island and Chesapeake Beach.

Fleet Leaves Anchorage at Hampton Road

25 Warships Offer Great Spectacle to Crowds in Norfolk Area.

Norfolk, Va., July 8 (Spl.).—Twenty-five warships steaming out of Hampton Roads simultaneously at midnight tonight furnished an inspiring sight for those who stayed awake to witness it. There were many people along the shores near the Naval Base and Old Point Comfort, too, to witness the departure of the vessels.

It was a brand-new sight and an innovation in naval movements in peace time. Every man on board the ships was at his post, although a number were ordinarily entitled to have been in their bunks.

Outside the Virginia capes the 25 vessels were met by 15 others and the cruise toward the coast of Massachusetts was begun. The fleet is bound for Provincetown to spend most of the remainder of the summer in tactical maneuvers.

The ships leaving Hampton Roads were the cruiser Indianapolis, flagship of the scouting force and from which Vice Admiral E. R. Campbell, commander in chief, directs the movements of the fleet, the cruisers Minneapolis, Raleigh, Portland and Louisville and the destroyers Fox, Dallas, Barry, Hopkins, Bainbridge, McFarland, Harbell, Darnell, Greel, Hulbert, Noa, William F. Preston, Leary, Schenck and Herbert and the tender ship Whitney. Outside the capes were the cruisers Salt Lake City, Chester, Pensacola, Richmond and a number of destroyers.

The fleet previously had been scheduled to sail tomorrow at 8 a. m. Men had been granted liberty until 6 a. m. Today details were sent ashore to round up liberty parties, ordering them back to their ships by 10 p. m.

The supply ships Bridge and Artic will arrive Wednesday to load supplies and deliver them to the ships off Provincetown. The Bridge will return for a second cargo and later will load again for Guantanamo, Cuba. The fleet on their way back to the West oCast in the fall will spend several days in Guantanamo Bay, and take on supplies from the naval base there.

The entire fleet, including the battle force, is scheduled to anchor in Hampton Roads in September, to spend several weeks before starting on the voyage to the West Coast.

Ritchie Gains With Radcliffe In Senate Race

Lee and Walsh Thought to Be Behind Switch as Aid to Tydings.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Withdrawal of George L. Radcliffe from the Democratic gubernatorial race in Maryland and announcement of his candidacy for the United States Senate over the week-end has gone far to clarify that political situation, even though it leaves some aspects in doubt.

Mr. Radcliffe's action was regarded as strengthening the candidacy of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie for a fifth term, but he was not in any real danger from the friend of President Roosevelt. Ritchie's nomination was virtually certain with Radcliffe and Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore as his avowed opponents.

It might be supposed that by withdrawing Mr. Radcliffe left the way for crystallization of anti-Ritchie sentiment behind Mayor Jackson. But on the basis of reports from an authoritative source that several of the more important Eastern Shore Democratic leaders, who helped get Radcliffe into the gubernatorial race in hope of blocking Ritchie, were now ready to support the Governor on a Ritchie-Radcliffe ticket, it is doubtful whether Jackson will be able to muster any great support. But it will take a week or two to show that conclusively.

Break for Tydings.

Thus looking at the Radcliffe development the day after it took place, the conclusion is unescapable that the chief beneficiary of it will be Senator Millard E. Tydings, who has been extricated from a dangerous situation for his political future with grace, if not with an entirely good face.

There is good reason to believe that the week-end maneuver was designed primarily by E. Brooke Lee, Montgomery County leader and second only to Ritchie as the Democratic State leader outside of Baltimore City, to rescue Tydings from the end of a political limb before it was sawed off under him.

Gov. Ritchie had no hand in getting Radcliffe to switch from the gubernatorial to the senatorial races and has withheld his indorsement of the latter as a running mate. Failing in their efforts to get Jackson out of the gubernatorial race earlier in the week, the Radcliffe-Tydings camp finally came to the realization that their aspirations were hopeless and undertook to get their candidate on the Ritchie ticket.

Lee-Walsh Idea.

Lee with William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, the Democratic leader in Allegany County, came to the rescue. They first tried to elicit the Governor's support and failed. But they learned Ritchie was not committed to any candidate for the Senate and that he had no objections to his two lieutenants doing what they could in behalf of Radcliffe.

The result was that the Ritchie leaders in all but two of the Western Shore counties promised to support Radcliffe for the Senate. Lee and Walsh did not consult the leaders in Howard and Baltimore counties because each has a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Howard Bruce comes from Howard County and in Baltimore County there has been an incipient senatorial boom for State Senator David G. McIntosh. The Baltimore City leaders were not consulted.

On the face of the organization support mustered by Lee and Walsh, the prospects would seem to favor victory for Radcliffe in his new candidacy, but this will not be certain at least for a week. Howard Bruce, Democratic National committeeman, wants to run for the Senate and was waiting only for an opportune moment to file his candidacy as a part of the Ritchie ticket. Had he acted a week ago, Radcliffe and Tydings would have been left out on their political limb.

Bruce May Make Race.

William Curran and the Baltimore leaders have displayed no enthusiasm for Radcliffe as a Senatorial candidate, taking the view that to give him the nomination on a silver platter, as it were, after he found his prospects for the gubernatorial nomination hopeless is to reward insurgency while penalizing loyal Ritchie supporters like Bruce.

Curran is one of the smartest political strategists in Maryland, and, although he was caught asleep over the week-end by the Lee-Walsh maneuver, it is possible he may persuade Mr. Bruce to get into the fight. If he does, it is by no means certain Mr. Radcliffe would be the winner.

Neither Mr. Radcliffe nor Mayor Jackson during the weeks they have been gubernatorial candidates have been able to demonstrate any support beyond that which is essentially anti-Ritchie. This came chiefly fro mthe Eastern Shore, where Ritchie has never been popular because of his prohibition views, and more recently because of his handling of the Princess Anne lynching.

Thus, with Radcliffe, a native Eastern Shoreman, out of the race, Mayor Jackson will get the bitter anti-Ritchie voters if the contest goes to a showdown. Thus he will be able to make a better showing than if this sentiment was divided between two anti-Ritchie candidates.

National Clash Avoided.

Ritchie, on the other hand, will escape what might have been an ugly campaign with a candidate labeled the close friend of President Roosevelt and a New Deal supporter. It would have been an extraneous issue, but nevertheless a harassing one, which would bring those elements of the party deeply interested in the National scene into collision with the State elements. This, if it has not been avoided, has been shifted to the Senatorial race, where many believe it belongs.

There also is a psychological effect to the Radcliffe withdrawal which will help Ritchie. The fact that one of his opponents has quit the fight increases the desire of the doubtful in the party to jump on the Ritchie bandwagon.

This was illustrated Saturday night when Herbert R. O'Conor, who earlier in the week announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, indnependent of any faction, announced an hour after the Radcliffe statement that he was supporting Gov. Ritchie.

Tydings is now in a position to make his peace with Ritchie, in order to clear the way for his own renomination four years hence. Many of Tydings' closest friends have been convinced that even if he won with Radcliffe, he would never have an undisputed control of Maryland democracy because in every county there would be an anti-Tydings faction for years to come and that these factions would be particularly intent on sharpening their knives for him in 1938.

Meanwhile the Republican situation remained as confused as a month ago, with H. Webster Smith and Harry W. Nice andn their supporters arguing it out over the Republican gubernatorial nomination. The Baltimore City Republican committee and Mr. Smith indulged in a heated exchange during the week. The prospects continue to favor the nomination of Mr. Nice in the fall.

In the Republican party Dr. Joseph I. France, whose latest distinnction was that he was thrown out of the Republican National convention in 1932 was challenged in his candidacy for the Senate by Linwood L. Clarke. -Senantor Phillips Lee Goldsborough has not yet announced what course he will pursue.

Church Differences Are Unavoidable, He Tells Affairs Meeting.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., July 8.—Opening the second and concluding week of the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, Rabbi David de Sola Pool, of New York, tonight pleaded for world-wide religious cooperation in the face of economic stress and war-like tendencies.

In a special vesper service address, Rabbi de Sola Pool asked the forgetfulness of petty racial and religious prejudices which have sprung up in this period of economic crisis.

"Religious differences," he said, "are historically conditioned and inevitable, but religious prejudices are acquired and are avoidable.

"Human misery, which often drives men from reality, is the reason for Germany's outbreak against the Jew, and this is the explanation of the sudden weed-like growth in America of numerous movements of organized prejudice and hate."

Cites Economic Need.

Citing the failures in the struggle against war, poverty, unemployment and crime, he urged racial and religious understanding as a means of restoring economic and social stability.

Six round-table forums on international affairs, political and economic problems, religious questions and educational trends will resume the institute's program tomorrow.

In a series of special evening addresses featuring the week's session, Donald Richberg, general counsel for the NRA, will speak tomorrow on the National recovery program. John W. Davis, former Democratic nominee and later Ambassador to Great Britain, will speak Tuesday on "The Old Order."

Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, is scheduled to talk Thursday on "The Legal Limitations of Government Regulation Under the NRA."

Other evening speakers are Mrs. George J. Wyeth, of New York, member of the Woman's National Republican Club, and Charles M. Kinsolving, National commander of the American Veterans Association.

Dr. A. J. Hettinger, jr., of the Investment Research Corporation, Detroit, Mich., will lead round-table discussions on "Management vs. Regulation in Government."

Prominent industrialists and Government officials who will take part in the program include Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of railroads; Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission; George F. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works; Wallace Thompson, author and editor, of New York; Stephen M. du Bral, of the General Motors Corporation; Malcolm C. Rorty, former chief statistician of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; Mordecai Ezekiel, economist for the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Lawrence H. Seltzer, of the AAA.

Plan to Discuss NRA.

The round table on "An Evaluation of the Work of the NRA," will be directed by Spencer Miller, jr., of New York, secretary of the Workers Education Bureau of America.

The various aspects of the recovery program will be discussed by Mr. Richberg, Dr. Herbert Fraser, of Swarthmore College; Robert Johnson, president of Johnson and Johnson; Russell Watson, counsel for Johnson and Johnson; Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the NRA Labor Advisory Board; Dr. Carmen Haider, New York writer; Dexter Keezer, director of the Consumers Advisory Board of the NRA; Isabel Leighton, executive of the recovery program in New York; F. J. Schlink, president of Consumer's Research; Dr. David Cushman Coyle, of the Public Works Administration, and Dr. Leon Henderson, director of research in the NRA.

A study of Asiatic conditions will be presented in the forum on "Currents of Conflict in the Far East," led by Grover Clark, of New York, who has spent many years in Japan and China and is now a consultant on Far Eastern affairs.

The background and development of problems confronting the major powers of the Far East will be explained by Dr. N. Gist Gee, of the Associated Colleges of China; Dr. Harley F. McNair, of the University of Chicago; C. K. Moser, of the Department of Commerce; Mrs. F. Louis Slade, vice president of the China Institute in America; Chih Meng, associate director of the China Institute in America; Prof. Masamichi Royama, of the Imperial University, Tokyo, Japan; Ben Dorfman, of New York, and Dr. Quincy Wright, of the University of Chicago.

Prof. George B. Zehmer, of the University of Virginia, will direct a round table on "The Interpretation and Evaluation of Recent Trends in Education."

Educators on Program.

Works, of the University of Chicago; Prof. Stringfellow Barr, of the University of Virginia; Dr. R. C. Brooks, of Swarthmore College; Dr. William R. Smithey, of the University of Virginia; Dr. Joy E. Morgan, editor of the journal of the National Education Association; Prof. George W. Eutsler, of the University of Virginia; Dr. Joseph K. Hart, of Vanderbilt University; Dr. W. T. Virginia Calm May Presage Ballot Storm

Lack of Primary Entrants Fails to Reassure Incumbents.

By J. K. Irving, Jr.

Lynchburg, Va., July 8.—The apathetic appearance of Virginia politics, as immediately applicable to members of the next House of Representatives, is by no means a faithful index to the true condition.

Certainly some of the aspirants are not feeling that sense of security the casual observer would expect from men who without a scintilla of opposition have been certified as candidates of the Democratic party. The principal reason for apprehension is that having been thus certified the nine incumbents will not participate in the customary primary; the people will read their names on but one ballot—that of the general election in November.

That means that they must face whatever opposition may arise from Republicans or independents, without the comforting nucleus of a following bound by the party pledge exacted from all those entering primaries. How much that will amount to in the long run none can say this early in the campaign. But it has its possibilities and these possibilities, naturally, are not calculated to comfort the fence-menders, even though they have received a fine negative indorsement from the party.

G. O. P. Takes Time.

It puts their cards on the table and prevents them from playing their hands until the opposition gets ready to "chip in." Apparently the Republicans are in no hurry. For the most part they are silent, but that is no reason to believe that they are not diligently planning an active campaign. Whether it will be the usual perfunctory gesture of putting up candidates, merely to indicate that the party is still in the running or something more subtle and stragetic is causing no little speculation among those whose custom it is to analyze the political test tube.

It is not at all surprising that the first indication of a fight should arise in the battle-scarred Ninth District. There the lines have been drawn definitely for the time at least. The incumbent, Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., finds himself in one corner of a triangle with Fred Parks, Republican, of Abingdon, on one hand and Bruce Crawford, independent Democrat on the other. Between them it seems that a good deal of Mr. Flannagan's thunder will be stolen. Parks, according to the rule, will assail the New Deal in general. Crawford, friend of the farmer and of the laboring man, announces he will do for these what he claims Mr. Flannagan has failed to do—see that the New Deal makes good its promises for genuine relief. It will be a real test of Flannagan's strength.

Tight Race Seen.

The southwest not only is pretty evenly divided between the two parties, but much of its voting strength is in the hands of laborers and farmers. Furthermore, it is hinted, utterly unofficially, of course, that a Crawford-Parks coalition would result in a disastrously potent machine. If all three stick, however, it is probable that Flannagan will enjoy the "edge."

Another interesting point is the Seventh District, more on account of the peculiar condition there than because of immediate threats against the position of Representative A. Willis Robertson. Jacob A. Garber, formerly Republican Representative from that section and undoubtedly the strongest member of the party in the Seventh, holds a Democratic office, being connected with the internal revenue commissioner's staff in Richmond. That takes him "out of politics" so far as the congressional race is concerned and should leave Mr. Robertson enjoying as much peace of mind as any Virginia Representative. Yet it would not tend to lower a stout independent in the estimation of those who believe in the victor's title to the spoils. Especially would such a man find favor in the eyes of certain Democratic leaders who not only cling uncompromisingly to the ancient rule, but who think they should have been rewarded with Jake Garber's job.

The situation throughout is unique to say the least. Very possibly the result will be regular. There are, however, some dangerous possibilities tantalizing the regulars during the next four months.

New Clews Lacking In Hastings Death

Maj. Kent More Cheerful, Warned Not to Talk.

Roanoke, Va., July 8 (AP).—The investigation by Federal authorities into the death of Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings, slain operator of the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel, whose body was found 10 days ago near Stroudsburg, Pa., appeared today to have settled down to hum-drum routine.

Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., who is held on charges under the amended Lindbergh kidnaping law, was much more cheerful yesterday when visited in the city jail by one of his attorneys.

"Don't talk to him either," the attorney said to Kent, referring to a newspaperman who appeared at the jail. Kent previously had been instructed by his counsel to discuss the case with no one.

Workers Wait Code Decision At Westminster

Clothing Firm May Be Told to Make Wage Restitution.

Westminster, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—Approximately 600 employes of the local garment factories operated by L. Grief & Bro., Inc., Baltimore clothing manufacturers, will be affected by the findings of the National Compliance Board of the NRA, which has decreed that the concern must make wage restitution estimated at $100,000 if it does not obtain a special wage exemption under the clothing code in two weeks.

Approximately 3,400 employes of the company, working in nine other branch factories throughout Pennsylvania and Virginia, also are affected by the ruling, which threatens the manufacturers with loss of their Blue Eagle and the right to use NRA labels if they should fail to obtain the exemption.

Under the direction of the Men's Clothing Code Authority, which charged the company with wage violations, and John R. Beecroft, NRA deputy administrator, hearings are scheduled either in New York or Washington.

Investigators who arrived Thursday to question workers in a general check-up, following a preliminary investigation, were mistaken for union agitators both by the workers and Mayor George E. Matthews, of Westminster, and were refused a permit to contact employes on the streets with circulars.

In refusing the permit, Mayor Matthews said he thought the investigators were union agitators, and took advantage of a local law, recently invoked, to prevent the distribution of circulars on the streets by union representatives.

Virginia to Check Drought Area Cattle

First Shipment Expected to Arrive Thursday.

Richmond, Va., July 8 (AP).—Sidney P. Adair, executive assistant to William A. Smith, FERA administrator, said tonight that cattle from the drought area in the West will be inspected by agents of the Federal Bureau of Animal Husbandry when they begin arriving in Virginia Thursday.

Approximately 750 head of cattle have already arrived in Virginia, consigned to Valley points for feeding by private shippers.

In the fist shipment under relief administration auspices will be 5,000 head. Application has been made for 50,000.

Whistler.

Whistler, in many respects, was the victim of his own wit. For several years there has raged a controversy over the time and place of his birth. The reason is that once, rather justly taunted over his birthplace, he retorted that he refused to have been born in Lowell, Mass.

While the denial was not without cultural, sociological or aesthetic justification in the minds of many who have seen this dreary mill city of absentee ownership, nevertheless James Abbott Whistler was born there on July 10, 1834, in a substantial two-and-a-half story house on Worthen street, then the property of the Locks and Canals Proprietors.

It doesn't matter where Whistler was born, or that his name was James Abbott Whistler to which he added, without parental permission, the McNeill by which he is well known. Despite his Lowell birth and his exaggerated name, Whistler was an eminent artist, and that is what counts. As all who recall Walter Greaves' portrait of him will readily see, he was also a rather disagreeable, thoroughly affected person. But that does not matter much, either. His personality is no mystery. He was a poseur in a period when pose was important. But he did paint a few good pictures; he did say a few wise things about art.

It is probable that Whistler will last among the small list of truly great artists. Whenever pleasant painters are spoken of, at least, his Battersea Bridge will come to mind, and whenever one talks of form, composition, or even sentiment in art, the portrait of his mother will be remembered.

There has been too much written about Whistler. He has been both praised and damned too recklessly. What is not often enough said is that he knew to perfection the uses of self-exploitation. He knew, and perhaps it was he who said, that a gentleman is one who is intentionally rude. In other words, despite the fact that he was a good painter in his own right, he believed that what we call personality was more important for contemporary fame than the ability to outpaint others. Thus he exploited his crankiness and forced himself into high places. He probably believed in himself and his pose became subconscious. He was honest in his insistence that he had struck upon a new medium in art.

That his influence upon the painters of the world is slight is of no especial significance. That he did add a few canvases which pass muster with the sternest critics, and that at least one of his paintings will probably always be remembered, are sufficient reasons to insist that James Abbott (McNeill) Whistler will be subject for comment and criticism another hundred years hence.

Equality Might Help.

Continuation of the 5 per cent reduction in Federal salaries for at least another six months was taken for granted. Indeed, the full 15 per cent reduction would still be in effect if Congress had retained the original plan of making restoration contingent upon advances in the cost of living. According to the Department of Labor, living expenses are still 20 per cent lower than during the base period—the first half of 1928.

Since the President's last proclamation on salaries, in January, the cost of living index has shown only negligible change. The sliding scale of pay adjustments was adopted in the days when Administration leaders thought they could manipulate a general advance in prices by reducing the gold value of the dollar. Government employes are fortunate to have their pay scale largely divorced from Prof. Warren's exploded theories. Present indications are that when the remaining 5 per cent is restored to their checks it will come through Congressional action, and not as a by-product of monetary legerdemain.

On the whole, Congress has dealt fairly with Government workers in matters of remuneration. Automatic promotion also has been restored in various branches of the classified service. Many employes, especially in the emergency organizations, are now more concerned over vacations and reasonable hours than further restoration of their base pay. In this respect there is widespread inequality in the Federal service. Some groups idle through an easy day with one eye on the clock, while others have to remain on the job long after the regular closing hour.

Secretary Ickes has quite properly informed employes of the PWA and Interior Department that he expects a full day's work from each of them every working day. Fair play on the part of the Government demands a similar response from its employes. But would the laxity of which Secretary Ickes complains be as prevalent if work were more evenly distributed? While some are wasting the taxpayers' money others are denied well-earned vacations because of a shortage of personnel in their particular divisions. Some attention to spreading the work in Government service might improve morale as well as efficiency.

Advice To A Chairman.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of the Nation has the public as a whole been as ignorant of the underlying implications of domestic policy as is the case today. Paradoxically, that ignorance is the more dangerous because it is half-instructed.

Radio speeches by the President and frequent pronouncements of lesser majority party leaders have not failed to emphasize to everyone the positive gains made by the present Administration—and they should not be minimized. But far too little attention has been paid to the postponed costs of these gains, or to those subtle changes in the philosophy of government which are the more insidious because, when established, they call for further changes in order to facilitate the course embarked upon.

One very important reason for present popular confusion is clear. It lies in the failure of Congress to examine and analyze much of the far-reaching legislation adopted at its last session. Close scrutiny by Congress permits comprehension by the country as a whole of the issues at stake. Rubber-stamp legislation pushed through under gag rule and by a steam-roller majority, inevitably means a lack of public appreciation of what is involved. When legislators themselves admit that they have no understanding of some of the laws they have passed, popular ignorance on the subject is scarcely unnatural.

Judging by his campaign strategy to date, Mr. Henry P. Fletcher appears to have more than an inkling of the political significance of this situation. His speech at the Republican anniversary rally at Jackson, Mich., last Saturday, indicated at several points that he sees the need of analyzing measures passed into law during recent months. In other words, the Republican chairman seeks to remedy the deficiencies of his party in the last Congress.

If Mr. Fletcher pursues this line with intelligence and restraint during the coming campaign he may do his country as well as his party a great service. In large measure the test will be in his ability to subordinate the customary exaggerations of politics to sincere appraisal of realities. A few may be impressed by his subtle dig in saying that our recovery agencies are "lettered on the Russian model." Others may be pleased by carefully qualified comparisons with Mussolini and Hitler. But the American people as a whole are not scared by bogeys, particularly when trotted out prior to elections by a party chairman.

At the present time Mr. Fletcher seems to be wavering between a policy of exploitation and one of analysis. Clearly the opportunity of his party lies in avoiding the former and stressing the latter. Everyone knows that these are extraordinary times, which tend to justify extraordinary measures. But relatively few understand what is involved in the extraordinary measures already taken. That is what they wish to know, and that is what neither Congress nor the Administration has been inclined to tell them.

If Mr. Fletcher proves able to fill this gap he will be assured in advance of the attention of that great audience which is too intelligent to be committed to any particular party. But he will need to remember that this all-important audience will be highly critical as well as closely attentive.

The Film Crusade.

The church-sponsored demand for clean motion pictures has already enlisted the backing of some 12,000,000 people, Catholics, Jews and Protestants, according to estimates compiled by those who are organizing this crusade. Such an overwhelming condemnation of the indecent can scarcely fail to have a profound effect on Hollywood.

Already the industry has taken definite steps to correct the abuses of which it is accused. One of the most significant is the appointment of Joseph I. Breen, an assistant director of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as film censor to view all films prior to distribution. Mr. Breen's standard will be the production "code," to which none of the ecclesiastical organizations appear to object. His decisions will be subject to possible revision by the association's board of directors.

If 12,000,000 people are known to be lined up for decent pictures, the industry will almost certainly surrender to the voice of this strong opinion. In the past, critics of the association have claimed violations of its ethical code, despite the attempts on the part of Will Hays to enforce it. Now it is up to the producers themselves to set their own houses in order and up to Censor Breen to see that they conform to the tenets of reasonable good taste.

A list just issued by the Chicago Archdiocese names 134 current offerings. Of these, 52 pass muster, 41 are said to be "offensive in spots," and 31 are called outright "immoral and indecent."

In other words, 25 per cent of current offerings are stigmatized as the type of movie which presumably 12,000,000 potential patrons do not wish to see. With that intimation as a guide the motion picture industry should be able to eliminate the smut from its products without flying to the opposite extreme of banality which is too often encouraged by undiscriminating censorship.

Skyline Drive.

That beautiful highway which has been cut into the most attractive ridges of the Shenandoah National Park has intrigued motorists for about three years. Still it remains closed to the public, and relatively few have been permitted to enjoy its cool atmosphere and the new vistas of mountains, woods and valleys that it will some day make accessible. It is good news, therefore, that Charles H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, and other engineers are inspecting the project with the view of naming a date on which it may be opened to public traffic.

Reasons for the delay in completion of this highway are not difficult to find. Virginia was unable to turn over all of the Shenandoah Park area to the Federal Government because of disputes with property owners. Fortunately condemnation suits have now been completed, and indications are that Virginia will be ready to give the National Park Service a clear title to the entire area within six weeks.

After grading on a 38-mile stretch of Skyline Drive was completed it was allowed to settle for a year. For a short time this unfinished roadway was opened to the public, but some motorists committed such depredations along the drive that it was again closed. Passes were then issued to a comparatively few individuals who could be relied upon not to molest the mountain laurel, young evergreens, &c. Trouble of this sort is not anticipated after the Park Service obtains full policing authority over the highway.

Now the road is entirely closed to traffic, for surfacing. Officials hope that it may be open to the public by Sept. 15. Continued delay has whetted our appetite. With all due regard for the complications of developing a new National park, officials would do well to consider the legitimate impatience of sweltering Washingtonians.

The Suicide Problem.

Very little is known about suicide in spite of the fact that the impulse of self-destruction claims about 25,000 lives in the United States each year. The customary attitude is to attribute deaths from this cause to the complexity of modern life and assume that nothing can be done about them.

Popular belief in a relationship between economic conditions and the number of suicides is to some extent upheld by the findings of Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician. The drop in the suicide rate for 100 cities from 21.3 per 100,000 persons in 1932 to 19.1 in 1933, he says, reflects improved circumstances "which have a direct bearing on a measurable proportion of the suicides due to unemployment, business failures, general discouragement, &c."

Many other factors would have to be considered, however, to obtain a full understanding of the problem. In the heyday of prosperity the suicide rate was only slightly lower than it was last year. Excessive rates in 1908, 1914-15, 1931-32 indicate a direct relationship between self-destruction and cataclysmic events that tend to destroy social stability. The prevalence of suicides in post-war Austria and Germany confirms this point. But when it is accepted much that is mysterious remains.

The highest ratios of suicide to population are not found in the large cities, where the strains of modern life are supposed to be most severe. Davenport, Iowa, in the heart of our greatest agricultural area, has a suicide rate nearly ten times that of Troy, N. Y., an industrial center. Washington residents indulge in twice as much self-murder (relatively, of course) as the people of Chicago, Detroit and Philadelphia. Carrying the anomaly a step further, Switzerland has a suicide rate of 25 per 100,000 persons, while the Irish Free State maintains a rate of about 3.4.

Perhaps ennui is as much a cause of self-obliteration as is economic failure. On a basis of ratio, suicide may indeed be more prevalent in the palaces of millionaires than in the hovels of the unemployed. It seems to result from a state of mind that may afflict individuals in all strata of society. Heredity and disposition are doubtless important factors. Suicide is often a result of mental disease.

Medical science can not be expected to bring forth a remedy for a cause of death that is so complicated. But the suicide toll could be greatly reduced by proper psychological analysis and treatment. It offers a formidable challenge that has not yet been fully accepted by the medical profession.

The Planned Economy.

By executive order, prior to his departure from Washington, President Roosevelt removed from the classified civil service all employes of the National Soldiers Home at Johnson City, Tenn. Thus is established a precedent for direct encroachment upon the merit system. The home employs only 177 individuals. Consequently, the immediate effect of the order will be limited. But the principle it involves is of the foremost importance.

Several months ago the President struck a blow at the merit system by ousting a group of employes in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. They had been "blanketed" into the classified service by an executive order of President Hoover on his own initiative. In the current order the White House has gone a step further, denying civil service protection to a group taken into the classified service by order of Congress.

During the last session an attempt was made to eliminate all employes who were "covered in" as a result of the law consolidating veterans activities. The measure failed of enactment. But the President's order has the effect of applying the terms of this bill to one of the Government's twelve homes for disabled soldiers.

The immediate appointment of Lee Harr as superintentent of the home, at the behest of Senator McKellar, lends support to the contention of the National Federation of Federal Employes that this attack upon the merit system "has been made in response to a demand for jobs to take care of a State political situation."

Efforts to excuse this new surrender to patronage on the ground that the employes at Johnson City are merely being restored to the status they occupied prior to 1931, are simply childish. Nearly all of the Government workers enjoying civil service protection have obtained it through the "covering in" method, because of the reluctance of Congress to relinquish patronage "rights." The President's order is a stinging blow to the merit system, the more offensive because of his eloquent support of that system in public pronouncement.

Roger Babson says no one can be blamed for the depression. He would make a poor politician.

Voliva's prediction that the devil will take the world over in September causes us little concern. Even if he does, we don't think we should notice any difference.

Lament for Philippines.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The late and unlamented Seventy-third Congress will be held by history to an inescapable accountability for many sins of omission and commission. The coconut oil tax alone constitutes a cowardly betrayal by the American Congress of the Nation's responsibility for dependent peoples outside the continental United States.

When Congress enacted into law the revenue act imposing a 3-cent-per-pound processing tax on coconut oil from the Philippines, it deliberately violated the underlying principle of the McDuffie-Tydings independence law, in which it promised the Filipinos freedom within 10 years, providing that they among other things, reduce their annual shipments of coconut oil to the United States to 448,000,000 pounds. But ten days after the acceptance by the Filipinos of the independence contract, Congress levied a destructive tax upon that industry which supports one-fourth of the Philippine population. With one hand Congress offered independence in a form not desired by the Filipinos and with the other it destined them to ruin.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to reconsider the tax, saying it "would reflect discredit upon ourselves." However, through the machinations of well-paid lobbyists, Congress turned a deaf ear to the President.

What the American people think about this, they will have a chance to say on election day next November, but the Philippine people have no voice in the matter and they can only rely for fair treatment on the passion for honesty and justice in the hearts of the American people.

Meritorious Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the list of distinguished volunteers in the long campaign for elimination of alley conditions in Washington, published in your issue of July 6, the name of Mrs. Grace Vawter Bicknell should be added. Her little gray pamphlet, "Inhabited Alleys of Washington," published in 1913, bears testimony of laborious hours spent by its author among District records while cataloguing existing alleys. This pamphlet was effectively used in the crusade which was at its height when Mrs. Ellen Axson Wilson came to the White House and added her interest and devotion to the cause.

Mrs. Bicknell's work was done while she was chairman of the living conditions committee of the Washington branch, woman's welfare department, National Civic Federation. Its officers were Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, president; Mrs. Theodore North McLaughlin, vice president; Mrs. Minnie Harper Pilling, treasurer, and Miss Clara Farrar Smith, secretary. When the Washington branch was no more, Mrs. Hopkins kept the flag flying over the alleys with courage and perseverance that are rare indeed.

Placing the Blame.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Darrow report indicates monopolistic tendencies which are indisputable. The average manufacturers were not affected materially by the minimum wage. They could easily juggle that feature in their organization, which they did not fail to do, and immediately complimented the President and Gen. Johnson by submitting their own codes. They saw an opportunity to gain an advantage by fixing prices, which had, previous to the inauguration of NRA, descended to a lower scale than was justified and reasonable.

A modest increase in prices would have been absorbed graciously by the public, but when the dealers faced an average increase of about 75 per cent, it reacted to the point of stoical revolt and a consequent buyers' strike. These are the facts, which any business man will admit if he is at all honest in the premises.

This can not be charged to the President or to Gen. Hugh Johnson. It must be charged to the fact that the undertaking was of gigantic proportions and that these servants of the people were hoping for, and no doubt thought they were getting, patriotic cooperation on the part of American industrialists. The main trouble was there was absent that spirit of patriotism which our President hoped to rekindle.

America has no sense of responsibility to itself beyond immediate financial returns. We will never recover until we indorse and practice the spirit laid down by Franklin Roosevelt in launching the recovery features of his program. It will cost an awful lot to follow his program, but it won't cost anything like as much as it will if we do not follow it. W. C. PARDUE.

Money Problems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems that our monetary brain-trusters, including our Chief Executive, can not find a better way out of the existing dilemma than by borrowing the Government's own money from private individuals and private corporations, by increasing taxation, thus making the ultimate consumer—the farmer, the laborer, the producer—settle the ultimate bill. Yet no private individual or group has any legal claim or lien upon this thing we call money. Plainly, we are in a tragic swindle. Our banking is designed and operated on the simple principle of getting something for nothing. Our credit system, without which neither industry nor agriculture can possibly thrive and prosper, is in private hands, and manipulated almost entirely for private profit. Panics and depressions are neither "accidents" nor "acts of God." They are deliberately planned and created by the same money-lending fraternity which holds whole governments and nations today in its greedy clutches.

We are facing two alternatives:

1. To destroy all private monopolies, now controlling currencies, credits and banking, and to establish a governmental monetary control, thus securing normal prosperity and assuring its continuance for every man, woman and child in the Nation, or—

2. Continue under the existing arrangements of industry and finance until we reach a complete collapse through a slow process of industrial and financial breakdown.

Forbidden Fruits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking on behalf of my fellow college students, and also for those now in high school and grammar school, I would like to express to the Legion of Decency and other similar organizations our heartfelt thanks for the inestimable service they are doing us in their current campaign.

The old truth, "forbidden fruits are sweetest," is none the less cogent because it is platitudinous, and the churches in proscribing certain pictures have opened our eyes to the fact that there are still some current risque movies that we have missed. Needless to say, this oversight is being remedied with the utmost dispatch. Just give us one or two more lists of banned movies, and we shall not want for entertainment during the rest of the vacation period.

Let me hasten to add here that the "we" used in this letter is entirely editorial and not at all personal. I have seen none of the forbidden pictures, nor do I intend to see any of them. This may be merely coincidental; but I have always been allowed complete freedom in my choice of books, magazines, pictures and plays, and I do not believe my mind is any the more polluted for this. However, there are many who have been brought up under the prudish, sanctimonious rules approved by the church. It is for them that I am speaking, and for them that I say perhaps something should be done, but the Legion of Decency is not the proper or adequate solution to this problem. J. P.

As Others See It.

Old and New Deal.

The President in his recent message to Congress, designed to set forth a platform for the coming Congressional elections, joined a multitude of his followers in charging those who disagree with him with the desire to return to all the abuses and follies of the late '20s.

It is time someone reminded the present regime and the public that many of the more severe critics of the New Deal were equally sharp in their condemnation of the excesses and unsound policies of the Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover eras. Indeed, a little reflection will show that fundamentally much that is under criticism in the New Deal is little other than the mistaken ideas of the "New Era" in different guise, or diverted to new directions and different beneficiaries.

The securities markets of the late '20s were never more systematically or cunningly "rigged," for example, than the market for Government securities is today. What passed as prosperity in the older period was largely an enormously increased and wholly unwarranted utilization of credit in every available form. Yet the wildest financiers of that time were never more radical as inflationists than those at Washington who control, or try to control, credit today.

One of the most glaring defects of the policies, both governmental and private during the postwar era was that they undertook to deal with basic disarrangements in our economic life by the simple expedient of refusing to recognize their existence. It is upon precisely such a basis that the present administration is now attempting to restore conditions to a more satisfactory status. Many more instances could be cited.

It would be tragedy if the politicians were able indefinitely to persuade the rank and file that those who take exception to present policies are but spokesmen of the false leaders of earlier years.

The Post Impressionist

Peace—Yes: Quiet—No!

Postoffice, Monday.

ADVERTING to our recent talk about "quiet" books, Mrs. Leila Kestler ventures the belief that Washington is a noisy city. We gather that she means it is unnecessarily so.

In the column's Hundredth Edition, we properly listed Mrs. Kestler among our most valued contributors. Says she: "It was above the noise of an inferno, located in the neighborhood of Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue — where I spend the best part of my working hours—that I heard my name called." She implies that even the stentorian tones of the Post-Impressionist could only just surmount what, had the word not been debased, we might describe as a racket.

• • • •

Over-modest Mrs. Kestler belittles her communications: "If any idea of mine has reached first-base with the Column, it is indeed a compliment. I assure you that my reluctance to bombard your desk (or mayhap your waste-basket) with my scribbling is due solely to an acute consciousness of my limitations. As Will Rogers would say: 'You know, everybody is ignorant, only on different subjects'—although some of us do sit on the sideline, waiting and listening and observing, in hope to catch some novel concept by the tail."

Yet, part of her reluctance she attributes to capitaline clamor. She appears to hold, indeed, that Washington is so noisy as to imperil thought: "Four years of this rat-a-tat-tat of pulling down and building up would make a howling wilderness of any mind." Well, the Kestler wilderness blossoms.

• • • •

"The art of living," says Mrs. Kestler—in which she must include the art of thinking—"seldom centers around the job. To most of us, jobs aren't life. We squander the gold of our days, giving our lives away to things which have no substance, while the vital and the beautiful plead for recognition." And, apparently, Mrs. Kestler holds that this is more so in Washington than elsewhere, because in Washington there is more noise than in most places.

• • • •

"Washington," remarked Gen. Lafayette Kearsley, "is the noisiest city in the world."

• • • •

Only—was he right?

Even Mrs. Kestler, who goes not quite so far—is she right?

• • • •

For our part, we believe that there is no essential relationship between peace and quiet, but only an occasional coincidence; that every city has its own peculiar brand of noise, and that, with the possible exception of modern Rome, the question of which city is earth's noisiest is entirely a question of the individual hearer's particular detestations among noises.

• • • •

We like New York—for a week at a time. But we do not like New York's special noisiness. No matter what Manhattan hotel you go to sleep in, and no matter at what hour of the night you seek your more or less downy couch there, you are awakened within three hours by the blowing-up of a sewer pipe.

Boston's street cars have wheels that can produce a noise unequaled anywhere this side of Dante's—not Mrs. Kestler's—hell. Similarly, in its degree, Philadelphia, the peculiar qualities of its taxis' backfire. And thus Chicago: machine guns.

• • • •

Does the man live who can sleep in Paris while the dawn post-and-telegraph camions scream through its lovely streets? In Berlin, while the same sort of camions slavishly imitate their Paris enemies—the way that Berlin is always imitating Paris? Moscow church bells used to be elevating; Moscow factory whistles are unendurable.

Louis How, differing courageously from Gen. Kearsley, says there is no city so noisy as Rome. How says Rome was bad enough before the automobile, but that, once the Roman was given a motor horn to play with, the last hope vanished. "All Italians," says How, "love noise. They prefer musical noise, but, if they can't have that, they prefer discordant noise to quiet. And some kind of noise they will get—at any price."

• • • •

For the Post-Impressionist, the rat-a-tat-tatting is not what exalts Washington in the high list of municipal noise makers. Washington's noise distinction resides in the shrieks of her fire engines and ambulances. There are no such shrieks to any fire engines and ambulances anywhere else on earth. We should like to know what genius invented them; what diabolic District Commissioner first permitted their adoption.

We have a Parisian friend who went to a Washington hospital in its ambulance—for a broken leg—and never afterward could his broken ear drums vibrate to his loved one's voices. We had a Roman friend whose Washington house caught fire and who, when he heard the engines coming, leaped into the flames.

• • • •

But these were oldish folk, and we ourselves are no longer—and not yet—childish. Perhaps the children are the wise people, after all.

Says Mrs. Kestler:

"Life will get back at us! I asked the 10-month-old, whose smile I woo at leisure moments, what he thought of "peace and quiet." He shouted loudly and tweaked my nose. He meant that he thoroughly approved of noise—and in large doses.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Need for a Press Agent.

THERE is no better commentary on the highly developed propaganda facilities of the Brain Trust than the case of Mr. Robert E. Healy, formerly of the Federal Trade Commission, and one of those recently named to see that the country's security trade is conducted on a high and lofty basis.

BARGERON

For several weeks there was speculation as to who would be chairman of the new Securities Commission. It was pretty generally known who the members would be. But the chairmanship—ah, the speculation about it was rife. At the outset it appeared that Mr. Jim Landis would have the place, the Mr. Landis who did most of the work in writing the securities and the stock exchange acts, and to get away from whom the Senate insisted upon a separate commission.

• • • •

Then there bobbed up the name of Mr. Ferdinand Pecora, who made the legislation possible by bringing out the iniquities of Wall street. The only question about Mr. Pecora was whether he was available. There was no question, if he went to the commission at all, that it would be as chairman.

Lo and behold, when the chairmanship turned up who should have it but Mr. Joseph B. Kennedy, a former Wall street operator, and neither Mr. Landis nor Mr. Pecora.

The point is that at no time in the speculation was there any mention of Mr. Healy as the chairman. First it was Mr. Landis and then it was Mr. Pecora. Nary a word of Mr. Healy. It is very strange, indeed.

• • • •

It so happens that Mr. Healy was a pace-setter in the whole brain-trusting business though he wasn't known as a brain truster at all. In his days, so to speak, we didn't call reformers brain trusters. Maybe it was because Mr. Healy had no ambition to reform the whole country. But he reformed one phase of it, and how. He has, in fact, accomplished a job which none of the brain trusters will ever equal and he did it when they were still in school. He did it, too, as a Republican and under a Republican Administration.

What he did was to mark the doom of the power trust.

• • • •

It was around the power trust that the country first began to get restless, I think. From the disclosures concerning it we first began to realize that things were not as well with the full-dinner pail and bath-tub philosophy as they should be. There was a time, in fact, when Mr. Roosevelt intended to make the power trust the main theme of his campaign. He soon realized, however, that the depression had done his campaigning for him and that all he had to do was to sit tight.

From the power trust expose came our great sociological experiment at Muscle Shoals which with Mrs. Roosevelt's assistance may develop into homestead subsistence projects over all the land, if the land does not become one vast homestead subsistence project.

It was Mr. Healy who made the expose.

• • • •

There's a funny story about it, too. All of us remember the day the late Tom Walsh introduced his resolution in the Senate for an investigation of the power trust. The trust swung into action at once. Among other things it did to head off the resolution was to employ Ku Klux Klan lobbyists who in those days had influence hereabouts. The Klan had ceased pretty much to be a fraternity for floggings and the like. The heads here had come to be just lobbyists who would turn a trick for a fee. Their influence lay in the unnumbered folk they were supposed to lead.

Well, the crowd succeeded in diverting the investigation from the Senate to the Federal Trade Commission. It was, they considered, just as good as killing the investigation. And we newspapermen considered it the same ourselves. The commission had certainly been a good place to bury an investigation theretofore.

But we all, and particularly the power trust, reckoned without Mr. Healy. I take it from his name that he did not appreciate the high ideals of the Klan. Anyway he exposed the trust as well as the Senate possibly could have done.

The brain trusters really have him to thank a lot for their jobs.

West Virginia Man Is Killed by Train

Charles Town, W. Va., July 8 (Spl.).—Lionel J. Cogle, 27, was found dead along the Baltimore & Ohio tracks east of here yesterday. He had been struck by a train and probably was killed instantly.

Cogle, a furloughed trackman, was believed to have fallen asleep on the railroad tracks. His body was found by Harry Raukin, of Harpers Ferry, and Calvin Howell, of Engle. Cogle had been dead eight or ten hours. Prosecuting Attorney Porterfield and Justice J. D. Waylar, both of Charles Town, deemed an inquest unnecessary.

The deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cogle of this vicinity. Besides his parents, Cogle is survived by two brothers, Arnold and William, both at home.

Hitler's Liquidation A Borrowed Idea

Communists Practiced It on a Grand Scale by Butchering Millions; Il Duce Condones It; America Counseled to Watch.

By Lothrop Stoddard.
(Special Correspondence to The Post.)

HITLER'S "purge by blood" is arousing widespread reprobation, especially in America and Britain. Summary shootings of suspected individuals without even the semblance of a trial go against the Anglo-Saxon grain. We are accustomed to the idea that every man has certain legal rights which the State is bound to respect; that man should be considered primarily as an individual, and only secondarily as a member of a class or group.

That is not the ideal in Hitler's Third Reich. And, more important, it is not the ideal of some other countries—notably Communist Russia and Fascist Italy. In such countries the State comes first, and if any individual or category of individuals does not fit harmoniously into the designated State scheme, he or they, no matter how numerous, may summarily be "liquidated."

That was the word used, the other day, by an official spokesman of the Nazi regime to explain why traitors to the party and the Reich were thus informally disposed of. However, the term was not coined in Germany. It originated in Soviet Russia and has long been the stock phrase employed there to denote a similar method of State action.

Communists certainly can not object on principle to Hitler's blood-purge. Neither does Fascist Italy. The morning paper brings explicit proof of that in the shape of an editorial in Mussolini's official organ, the Popolo d'Italia. This editorial, to be sure, regrets the need for such ruthless action and asserts that it would have been wiser to have taken preventive measures which would have obviated the stern necessity.

But the editorial goes on to say summary executions were within the Hitler government's "revolutionary rights," and it comments approvingly that "the ability to put an end to such a situation is an excellent example of power." The editorial concludes that while executions should usually be carried out only on the authority of courts, there are "exceptional occasions when the individual servant of revolution has the right to administer justice with his trigger finger."

And So We Find Ruthless Methods Gaining Approval.

WE are thus faced with a political philosophy which is not confined to Germany, but is officially upheld by two other great powers and is sympathetically regarded by large numbers of persons in other lands, including our own.

Our local Communists are definitely in favor of such methods here should they ever get control; our various brands of Fascists have substantially the same attitude, and many unclassified persons of radical leanings are apt to consider the individual citizen as a pawn to be moved about and experimented on for the good of society as a whole, with scant regard for his own wishes or the effects of State action upon his particular well-being.

Now, there is no use going up in the air and getting hysterical over all this. We are confronted with a widespread political and social trend which has triumphed in three great countries and which may spread to other lands. Furthermore, there is very little we can do about it outside our own borders. But we certainly should carefully scrutinize these doctrines and see what they lead to in actual practice. We will then be in much better position to make up our minds whether we want such things to happen here; whether, in short, we are willing to pay the price for such economic and social benefits as a Communist or Fascist state may conceivably bring.

The effects of this philosophy of "liquidation" in Nazi Germany are well known to us all. So are its effects in Fascist Italy, from castor-oiling up or down. However, both countries are mere pikers in the liquidating game compared to Communist Russia, where the method was first put on an efficiency basis.

The Communist rulers of Russia first liquidated several millions of the old upper, middle and professional classes. They later liquidated some millions of individualistic peasant-farmers, termed Kulaks, who objected to the government's collectivizing of agriculture. But the liquidating process is by no means ended. It is now functioning busily among the collectivized peasants themselves.

Stories of Millions Dying In Russia Corroborated.

FOR the last two years rumors have been current of acute famine conditions in certain Russian areas. These rumors were always officially denied or minimized. A well-known American press correspondent has now lifted a corner of the veil. William Henry Chamberlin, having been transferred to another field after ten years of news gathering in Russia, has recently contributed a notable series of special articles to the Christian Science Monitor. In this series, significantly entitled, "Russia—Without Benefit of Censor," Mr. Chamberlin speaks his mind freely, since he is no longer on Russian service.

Last autumn he managed to visit some of the reputed famine districts, from which foreign correspondents had been rigidly excluded. He relates in detail his truly harrowing experiences and comes to the conclusion that famines had occurred which cost between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 lives. Furthermore, he concludes that this was mainly an artificial famine, due less to natural causes than to excessive grain-requisitions by the government and to its deliberate withholding of food in short-crop districts.

The Russian government's idea, according to Chamberlain, apparently was to "teach the peasants a lesson." In these districts not only were there still many obdurate Kulaks, but even the collectivized peasants were half-hearted and did not function as they should. So no food at all was given the starving Kulaks, while backsliding collective farms were given relief on a scale so inadequate as to cause the loss of countless lives.

This deliberate starvation policy was pithily summarized by President Kalinin, who stated officially: "The collective farmers this year have passed through a good school. For some, this school was quite ruthless."

"Not Cruel"—Just a Serene Experiment to Help the State.

THERE, in a nutshell, you have the philosophy of liquidation. It is an attitude, not of cruelty or brutality in the ordinary sense, but rather one of more or less serene and quite detached objectivity. This attitude regards individuals not as human beings, but much as the experimental scientist views his fruit flies and guinea pigs. The political experimenter makes up his mind that certain people block his projects or mar the symmetry of a plan he has formulated. That settles the matter in principle. Logically, they should be eliminated from the picture by the process euphemistically known as "liquidation." And this, be it noted, whether it involves hundreds, thousands, or millions of persons. The only factor thenceforth to be considered is whether or not the job actually can be done.

Now that is what we are up against. The philosophy of liquidation is already widespread in our contemporary world and is apparently gaining ground. Do we want it to take root here in America? If not, we should refuse to be beguiled by propagandist arguments in its favor, no matter how tellingly or alluringly phrased. And the best way to do this is by keeping close tabs on what it actually does abroad.

Love Among the Nazis.

THE tender passion, I take it, is not known among the swastikas and rubber truncheons of the unregenerate Storm Troopers. Nor does it even there lack its great purifying power, according to Miss I. A. R. Wylie's most recent novel—"To the Vanquished" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50). Salvation by Cupid, invented by the moral sentimentalists of the eighteenth century and vigorously hymned by the sentimental moralists of the nineteenth would seem by this latest evidence one of the undying themes of fiction. I'm afraid so.

THEO. HALL

Miss Wylie is a confirmed romancer. But she must find her added streak of realism somewhat embarrassing. Very clear-sighted, almost diagrammatically explanatory, is her picture of German conditions and Nazi psychology. Yet that realistic view all but runs away with her. When the time comes, as indeed it must in a romance, for love to make all things straight, Miss Wylie's necessary efforts are a little too obvious to make the tale hang together.

• • • •

Picture an anarchic and starving town of pre-Nazi Germany. (If you read R. C. Hutchinson's "The Unforgotten Prisoner" last fall, the scene should be plain.) No food in the shops, business at a standstill, human scavengers slinking up the dark streets.

The greatest tragedy is perhaps the complete hopelessness of youth. As one mother says of her son: "You can't blame him. He's been half-hungry ever since he was born. There's no work for him. There never will be any. Boys like him haven't a chance."

Our hero is such a lad. A general's son, he is now homeless, roves with a band of youths who make their living by theft and terrorism. Once, on a quest for food, Wolf (all the boys had taken the names of animals) breaks into the cellar of a doctor's house. There he encounters the doctor's daughter, blonde and brave Franzle, and there our romance begins.

• • • •

When the rising Hitler and his Brown Shirts come to town, Wolf and his comrades hail him as an idol. A fierce loyalty wells up in their hearts.

You will find a penetrating analysis of this situation in a passage narrating Die Feuhrer's thoughts: "A titanic figure loomed out of the mists of his dream. The superman—Germany. Not a nation of Germans, but a German nation welded into a unity such as Bismarck had not dared even to imagine—a totalitarian state, one soul, one mind, one body, one will, one race. He could do it. People had laughed at him. The so-called intelligentsia had laughed at him when he had tried to belong to them. Artists had laughed at him when he had wanted to be an artist. Even in the army they had kept him under. But their derision had put a weapon in his hands. It had given him an undying resentment. And with that resentment he had gathered youth to him. Not ordinary youth, rebellious, generous, hopeful and desirous of happiness, but desperate, angry youth, already defeated, already weary of itself and its own futility, its fists clenched against a world in which it had no place or future. He understood that youth so well."

So the roving boys become Storm Troopers, and Wolf rises to be Troop Leader.

Then, in the mopping up of reactionary elements, Wolf discovered that his beloved's father is a liberal, an enemy, that his house has sheltered Jews.

On that conflict Miss Wylie rings all possible changes—very neatly, one incident to the sub-topic. Franzle, with a placard beside her inscribed: "A German traitor who tried to seduce a loyal S. A. man from his duty," is publicly shamed. Her father alone stands up, looks the Nazis in the eye, and tells them they're cowards. Naturally, he is taken prisoner.

But when dysentery and typhoid break out in the prison camp, it is the doughty doctor who takes command. Wolf, heretofore inflexible, begins to waver after his Nazi chief falls before these great levelers. It takes only a little arguing by the torn but devoted Franzle to convert Wolf and make him see truth and beauty, and the two flee over the border.

• • • •

Miss Wylie has lived long in Germany (an earlier novel, "Toward Morning," describes that country in prewar days); one may assume her observations are factual.

It remains plain that the first seven-eighth of the book are by far the best. The conditions of German life which brought forth Hitler, the struggles of these young Storm Troopers with their own conscience—these are sharply realized and brought before us. Here Miss Wylie wrote with life in her pen.

But it is the last-scene entrance of Cupid as the "deus ex machina," too swift to be real, which shows us how a romanticist can halt a widely satisfying novel some steps short of a better epithet.

Druggists Meet In Hot Springs

Impending Legislation and Liquor Act to Occupy Virginia Parley.

Hot Springs, Va., July 8 (AP).—The fifty-third annual convention of the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association will begin here tomorrow with a wide range of subjects and business problems to be considered.

Among matters of importance will be a discussion of the proposed new food and drug act. Dr. W. G. Crockett, of Richmond, chairman of the commercial section, will present a paper on the subject.

The new Alcoholic Beverage Control act, as it affects druggists is also expected to be discussed, as well as the regulations prescribed by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Although a Republican, received Presidential reappointment to present post. Has served there six years. Slung hash to pay way through St. John's College. Widely traveled, he's advised railroads, dictated gas light rates, rerouted street cars, and evaluated utilities. 15 Properties Will Be Sold For Old Taxes

Carroll County Starts Drastic Drive Upon Delinquents.

Westminster, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—Action to collect delinquent taxes from property owners who have defaulted in their payments during the past four years, has been taken by Robert Brilhart, Carroll County tax collector.

Some 15 properties, together with approximately 250 acres of land were listed this week in the first of a series of scheduled tax sales. They will be sold at public auction at the courthouse, Saturday, July 28, at 10 a. m.

Similar proceedings will be taken with 161 other delinquents who have failed assessments since 1930, Mr. Brilhart said. Levies made on delinquent taxpayers last week resulted in 12 immediate settlements, according to the tax collector, who stated the tax sales involve about $19,000 due the county.

2-Year Payments Asked.

Property owners have been advised by the collector's office that a payment of two years' taxes will prevent the property from being sold.

Suits filed last year to collect delinquent taxes amounting to more than $10,000 from 1919 to 1928 have resulted in payments totaling more than $1,000. Instituted to clear the records of the collector's office during the period when McClellan C. Keefer was collector, the suits represented most of the accounts shown as unpaid on Keefer's books.

Keefer was found guilty in 1931 of defaulting in his return. A number of the sued taxpayers produced receipts indicating they paid the taxes, although books showed no record.

Judgments Obtained.

All except 15 of 150 suits filed last year were for amounts less than $100 and were entered in the magistrate's court. Judgments were obtained in less than 50 per cent of the cases, due either to the death of the defendant or removal from the county. Only 2 of the 15 cases entered in the circuit court have been tried, and in each case collection was barred by the statute of limitations.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, taxes owing over the four-year period from 1930 totaled $529,749.39. Collections during the year amounted to $397,010.92, while at present delinquent taxes, totaling $132,738.46, are distributed over the four-year period as follows: 1930, $11,049.24; 1931, $21,879.38; 1932, $49,599.97; 1933, $50,209.87.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Two Farewells.

It is an extremely interesting fact that the two great Victorian poets, Tennyson and Browning, wrote side by side for more than 50 years, should have each published the last volume that appeared in his lifetime the same month of the same year, and that these two volumes contained, respectively, the farewell that each of the two men of genius made to the world. In the month of December of the year 1889 Tennyson produced a volume called "Demeter and Other Poems," and Browning produced a volume called "Asolando."

The last poem in "Demeter" is called "Crossing the Bar," and the last poem in "Asolando" is called "Epilogue."

Now, nothing could be more characteristic of the genius of Tennyson than the thought and style of "Crossing the Bar;" and nothing could be more characteristic of Browning than the thought and style of the "Epilogue."

When in 1889 I saw in the newspapers that on December 12 the aged laureate would publish a volume of poems that would appear simultaneously in England and America, I waited eagerly for that day. When the shops were open on Chapel street, New Haven, I girded up my loins, sprinted half a mile to the bookstore, and bought the first copy sold in the city. I took it home, and read it straight through from cover to cover. I read it sadly, for it seemed to me the old man Tennyson had lost his grip; most of the verses were either commonplace or worse. Finally, I reached the last page, and read with thrills of joy the little poem called "Crossing the Bar." It took no talent or penetration on my part to perceive that it was a masterpiece. The next day every newspaper in America and I suppose in England copied it; but I had the fresh delight of discovery.

Browning's last volume came across the water in January, 1890; though it had been published on December 12, 1889, the very day he died. Thus it was a voice from the grave, and had additional solemnity and eloquence for that reason. Here, again, the best poem was on the last page, and it was equally clear that it would become a classic, though not so beautiful in expression as the one by Tennyson.

But could there ever have been anything more characteristic of the two great contemporary poets than the tone of their last farewell? Tennyson's is calm in its acquiescence; it is a valediction forbidding mourning. Serene and stately, it is like a solemn sunset. Browning's is fiercely aggressive, tumultuous, hungry for the last fight. Whoever may be beyond the barrier we call death, let them hear us yell as we advance! Here the grand adventure!

Tomorrow, "Crossing the Bar."

Retail Stores Show Outside Ownership

West Virginia Tax Returns Reveal Firms' Control.

Charleston, W. Va., July 8 (Spl.).—Nearly a quarter of the retail business transacted in West Virginia is done in stores owned or operated by concerns having headquarters outside the State, according to a tabulation of the consumers' sales tax by the State Tax Commissioner's office.

The tabulation is for May, the latest available, and it shows total collections in the sales tax of $363,087, of which $125,73 was collected by stores operated by out-of-State concerns. The total showed an increase of $106,683 over the preceding month and is $93,000 more than expected.

State tax officials attributed the increase to improving business.

Lead's Price Holds Steady; Copper Firm

Zinc Is Unchanged as Tin Increases Slightly on Quiet Market.

New York, July 8 (AP).—(Weekly metals)—Steady to firm conditions were reported in some of the nonferrous metal markets in the past week.

Tin prices rallied about ⅝ cent per pound in sympathy with overholiday advances in London apparently promoted by discussions there regarding a possible reduction in production quotas of 10 per cent by the International Tin Committee unless demand improves, although nothing official was reported. The market here, however, remained quiet.

Tin plate mills in this country curtailed operations over July 4, but the trade looked for maintenance of activity next week.

Zinc Prices Unchanged.

Zinc prices were unchanged, but a firm undertone reflected reports from the Tri-State district that mine producers would reduce ore output this month by about 80 per cent. Smelters consequently were firm in their views and moderate sales of metal put through were said to have been at full prices. Reduced stocks of zinc at the end of June reflected decreased production.

The recent declines in lead attracted a fair diversified consuming demand from practically all branches except the cable trade, and prices ruled steady.

Buyers were interested in covering July and August requirements. Lower prices now prevailing were said to have discouraged production of secondary refined metal.

Copper was without fresh feature as the price remained unchanged at 9 cents for blue eagle electrolytic. While fabricating subsidiaries were said to be withdrawing moderate quantities of metal from producers, independent consumer buying remained small. The export quotation was easier, reflecting declining European consumption, especially in Germany due to political unsettlement there.

Antimony Dull.

Antimony was dull in the domestic market, with the undertone somewhat easier owing to restricted consuming demand, but Chinese market was reported firmer on European buying.

The sharp decline in steel activity this week was credited to holiday shutdowns and absence of third-quarter orders, with the trade awaiting developments in the next few weeks to throw more light on the probable rate of summer activity. Part of the recent price advances will be lost through filing of reductions on many finished steel products to become effective this week. Pig iron production has also declined sharply, reflecting developments in steel.

"Courtesy Week" Auto Deaths Pass Last Year's Total

Baltimore, July 8 (Spl.).—Last week was "courtesy week" throughout Maryland—and deaths from auto injuries totaled two more than for the same week last year.

At midnight Saturday a total of ten deaths had been recorded in the State from motor cars. Last year the total was eight.

Col. E. Austin Baughman, automobile commissioner, decreed "courtesy week" in an effort to stem the rising tide of auto fatalities. He placed the week during the period when the Fourth of July occurs, knowing that roads are crowded around holiday time and that motor crashes are consequently more numerous.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Current Report Shows There No Longer Is Any Grounds for Criticizing Home Owners Loan Corporation for Inactivity.

By Ralph West Robey.

From its current report it seems like a far cry to the days when the Home Owners Loan Corporation was being widely criticized for it apparent inability to exchange its obligations for private mortgages. Now it is moving along at a rate that makes one thankful there is a limit on the amount it can exchange. Otherwise it would seem we might be faced with the danger that soon all mortgages on private homes would be converted into obligations guaranteed both as to principal and interest by the Government. This might be a pleasant situation for the homeowners, but those of us who would have to pay the losses by higher taxes would find it somewhat annoying.

That there will be losses scarcely is open to question. No organization can close as many loans as the HOLC is doing without some errors. Thus during week before last, the latest figures contained in the current release, loans amounting $52,000,000 were made on 17,500 homes. For the year ended June 28 the total number of loans favorably acted upon was 341,162. The amount involved was $1,028,000,000.

Every Dollar Guaranteed By Federal Government.

All of this, it should be remembered, represents an obligation of the United States Government. It is guaranteeing that each and everyone of these 341,162 homeowners henceforth will meet the interest and amortization payments on his mortgage—something that he by assumption has not been able to do in the past for otherwise he would not be subject to the aid of the HOLC. If he fails to meet these payments the mortgagee looks to the Government to make good. And the Government, of course, will look to the public as taypayers to make up any difference between the amount due on the mortgage and the amount that can be realized from foreclosure and sale of the home.

In other words, the activities of the HOLC are resulting in obligations of exactly the same character as those of the, say, RFC when it makes a loan to a railroad, or a bank, or a municipality, against "adequate collateral." If the loan is paid, there will be no ultimate drain upon the Treasury; if it is not paid, the Government bears the loss.

Strangely enough, however, while these loans of the RFC are carried in the regular daily statement of the Treasury, the loans of the HOLC are not even mentioned. This billion dollars that has been advanced during the last year, accordingly, is not included as a part of the Federal deficit, although the advances of the RFC are carried as a part of the deficit.

Distinction Rests Upon an Accounting Technicality.

The reason for this curious acounting inconsistency is that in the case of the RFC its obligations are given to the Treasury in exchange for cash that is handed over to the borrower, while in the case of the HOLC, its obligations are given directly to the beneficiary. Obviously, this is a mere technicality. Basically the two operations amount to exactly the same thing, and either both should be included as a part of the expenditures of the Government, or both should be excluded and shown as contingent liabilities.

That the question is of more than academic importance will be clear, I think, if it is recognized that in one week the amount of governmentally guaranteed obligations passed out, by just one of the organizations that enjoys this right, amounted to 75 per cent of the total regular expenditures of the Government and 130 per cent of all receipts by the Federal Treasury.

Markets Pass Dullest Week In Ten Years

Stock Trading Holds Near 400,000 Share Level Each Day.

New York, July 8 (AP).—Financial markets drifted through one of the quietest weeks of the past decade.

But the fact that securities prices held up in the face of an abrupt seasonal slackening in industrial production, with steel production falling to the lowest level in 15 months, was regarded as indicating considerable optimism over the prospect of autumn business revival.

The Independence Day holiday, together with the protracted heat wave, served to accentuate the lethargy of the financial community. Both stocks and bonds crept a trifle higher, some of the gilt-edged bonds—including U. S. Governments—recording new highs for the past several years.

Federal Regulation.

It was officially the first week of Federal regulation of the securities markets; but, inasmuch as the securities and exchange act applies chiefly to issues on registered exchanges, and the exchanges will not register until September 1, the Federal control took effect in theory only. Nevertheless, professional traders were distinctly on their good behavior, while the new securities commission organized and prepared to draw up its regulations.

Choice of Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of the commission was a decided surprise to Wall street, and it was reassuring to the securities business to have a man who has been known for large-scale transactions himself chosen for the post. Nevertheless, there was a widespread conviction that regulation will be decidedly rigid.

The commodity markets pointed upward here and there, such staples as rubber, sugar and silver reaching new highs for the past four years or so, but grains and cotton turned somewhat reactionary. Wheat futures lost 1 to 2 cents, and cotton declined nearly $2 a bale.

Favorable Reception.

The favorable reception accorded the largest corporate security issues in some time—the $50,000,000 4¼ per cent Pennsylvania Railroad bonds and $35,000,000 of Edison Illuminating of Boston 3 per cent notes—led to hopes that the remainder of the year would see a pick-up in the new issue market, but investment bankers said corporation officials were still wary of the securities act, and new financing would probably pick up only gradually.

The week's total turnover in the stock exchange amounted to only 1,893,453 shares, and that would have constituted a very dull single session according to the trading standards of a year ago. In the previous week, which contained one more session, only 3,001,520 shares were traded. The turnover in bonds amounted to $46,938,000 par value, against $53,304,000 the previous week. The Standard Statistics Co. price index of 90 stocks rose 0.6 of a point to 87.5, and the index of 60 corporate bonds 0.1 of a point to 86.5.

Cotton Prices Fall 25 Points During Week

Decline Is Attributed to Rain and Conditions in Germany.

Cotton prices on Saturday advanced to the highest point reached since March 15, 1934. On Monday, however, prices declined about 30 points on reports of rain in the Southwest and unsettled political and economic conditions in Germany.

More than half of this loss was regained on the following day, but late in the week prices again declined and on Friday closed about 25 points lower than a week earlier.

Activity in the spot cotton and cloth markets was reported as somewhat reduced during the week, which was due in part to the mid-week Independence Day holiday. Exports for the week were smaller than during the corresponding week a year ago.

Cotton Prices Lower.

The ten-market price for middling ⅞-inch cotton on July 6 was 11.91 cents, compared with 12.17 cents on June 29, and 10.10 cents on the corresponding day a year ago.

In the Augusta market grade discounts were slightly widened and on July 6 the average of the ten markets for strict low middling and low middling was 40 and 81 points, respectively, less than middling.

Premiums as quoted by the six markets for middling 15-16 and 1-inch on July 6, of 21 and 59 points on middling ⅞-inch, were the same as those on June 29. In the Memphis market the quotation for middling 1 1-16 inches was reduced 15 points to 100 points on middling ⅞-inch, and quotations for 1⅛ and 1 3-16 inches were increased 10 points to 165 and 285 points, respectively, on middling ⅞-inch.

Reported sales of spot cotton in the ten markets for the five business days of the week amounting to 20,000 bales, were about equal to those for the same five days of the previous week and larger than seasonal, but much smaller than during the corresponding week a year ago, when unusual buying activity for both domestic and foreign accounts prevailed.

Domestic Mill Inquiries.

New England and Southern mill centers reported a quiet week with some mills closed most of the week. Inquiries for raw cotton in both the Southern and Eastern mill markets were reported as slightly diminished, compared with the previous week, due in part to the mid-week holiday. Reports indicated continued limited inquiries from Southern mills for deferred shipments, and although in small volume, a few sales were said to cover shipments through July, 1935.

World consumption of all kinds of cotton from August 1 to June 1 of this season, according to the New York Cotton Exchange, amounting to 21,279,000 bales, was the largest for that period since 1929-30, and 4.6 per cent larger than for the corresponding period in 1932-33.

The increase of about 953,000 bales this season over the previous season for the corresponding ten months was, however, entirely accounted for by the increased use of foreign growths.

Federal Loans Lead Bonds In Past Week

Majority Recorded Gains Which Pushed Them to New Highs.

New York, July 8 (AP).—U. S. Government securities stepped into the bond market lead during the past week and the majority recorded advances which put them up to new high levels for the year.

Many prime corporation loans, although quieter than usual, also bettered their best prices since 1928 or longer. At the same time, secondary, or semispeculative liens moved somewhat irregularly and the averages for these groups were not able to show any appreciable progress.

In the matter of the highest grade investment issues, dealers pointed out that the extremely low yields for this class of bonds had tended recently to greatly restrict both public and institutional buying. The pressure of idle funds, however, was said to be almost as strong as ever.

With some loosening of the securities act of 1933, and the existing record easy money rates, banking circles were anticipating a flood of new financing and refunding operations in the next several months provided nothing serious appears in the economic picture to stem the investment tide.

The financial district was highly encouraged by the announcement that the Pennsylvania Railroad's $50,000,000 4½ per cent bond offering was oversubscribed. This issue was partly for the purpose of meeting the maturity of $60,000,000 of 6½s due in February, 1936. The sale of a $35,000,000 issue of 3 per cent notes by the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, based upon a price of 98.24 paid by the Underwriting Syndicate, was also seen as a straw in the investment wind.

The market for Government bonds apparently paid little attention to the fact that the Treasury, for the third consecutive week, will issue next Wednesday new bills $25,000,000 in excess of weekly maturity. The demand for listed Federal loans was brisk near the end of the week.

In the foreign section German obligations reflected the confused political situation in the Reich by dropping sharply. The Young and Dawes plan loans steadied on Thursday, however, when Berlin agreed to continue the service on those bonds held by the British. Hope was expressed that Washington would reach a similar accord with the German financial authorities. Other foreign bonds were mixed and quiet.

Industry Hits Mid-Year Lull, Reports Reveal

Retail Trade Responds to Torrid Weather and Advances.

New York, July 8 (AP).—Industry went into a pronounced mid-year lull last week, while retail trade responded to the impetus of holiday requirements, sharpened by torrid weather.

The early July lull in industry, while in marked contrast to the feverish activity at this time last year, was at least a return to normal conditions, and, with inventories in most lines now at relatively modest levels, a substantial seasonal upturn by autumn is widely anticipated.

The flurry of manufacturing in midsummer last year was highly artificial, reflecting inflation psychology and efforts to beat rising costs under NRA codes. It piled up large inventories, resulting in a slump in manufacturing in autumn, normally an active period.

Curtailed Output.

Steel output, automobile production, rubber tires, textiles, and several other manufacturing lines have substantially curtailed output. Steel output fell close to 20 per cent of capacity, the lowest in over a year, from about 60 per cent only three weeks ago, but the publication Steel estimates that it will get back above 30 per cent next week. There has been an abrupt falling off in demand after the expiration of second-quarter contracts, but the extremely low rate of last week reflected in part the closing down of some plants for the entire week because of the Fourth of July holiday.

Despite curtailment for the holiday week, automobile makers are finding summer demand better than looked for some weeks ago, and July manufacturing schedules have been advanced. The rubber tire industry has found inventories mounting, and has gone on a four-day week. Textiles are still sharply curtailed, with some mills closing for a week or two for vacation period. The summer curtailment in the textile mills, it is pointed out, has prevented the building up of burdensome inventories, and should result in a good pick-up in activity by autumn.

The statistics which appeared for the last week of June were distinctly encouraging. Freight carloadings showed a larger than seasonal gain, and reached a new high for the year, topping the previous peak reached in the week of March 17. The gain over the previous week was 3.7 per cent, but owing to sharply mounting freight overment of a year ago, the total of 644,572 cars was only 2,842 over the like week of 1933, or 0.4 per cent.

Power Output Up.

Electric power production for the last week of June also rose to a new high for the year, with a gain of about seasonal proportions.

Standard Statistics Co. tentatively estimates its index of industrial production for July, seasonally adjusted, at 75.2, compared with 79.0 in June, and the artificially high level of 89.9 reached in the flurry of this month last year.

"There is good reason for believing that autumn recovery of at least seasonal proportions will occur," says Standard's weekly business survey.

World Ford Sales In June Increase

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—World sales of the Ford Motor Co. in June were the highest made in that month since 1930, it was announced today at the company's exhibit in A Century of Progress Exposition. World sales for June, 1934, were announced as 101,661. In June, 1933, sales were 58,543. The company world's production for the month was 98,445 units, as compared to 61,912 a year ago, and the total for the first six months of 1934 was 536,637 passenger cars and commercial units, comparing with 228,117 in the same period of 1933.

Carnival Ready At St. Gabriel's

Festival Opens Tomorrow Night, Preceded by Parade.

Some of the newer attractions for the annual St. Gabriel's Church carnival, opening tomorrow night, are the "parcel post office" and the "airport" stands. At the "parcel post office" each entrant will be given a number entitling the holder to an article of merchandise. At the "airport" stand the numbers will correspond to the principal cities of the world.

The carnival will be inaugurated by the usual street parade, which forms at 7:15 p. m. on Eighth street northwest, between Quincy and Shepherd streets. Thomas A. McNamara is general chairman of the parade. Prizes will be awarded and many business firms have entered floats or trucks.

There will be 32 stands, with games offering practical articles for the household and amusements. There also will be attractions for the children and a miniature automobile will be given away to one of the juvenile patrons of the carnival, which will close July 21.

Curb Market Rises Slightly After Reverses

Specialties Lead Mild Rise as Utilities Gather Strength.

New York, July 8 (AP).—With the Fourth of July holiday intersecting last week's curb dealings, transfers again dwindled to around the low for the year. The mid-week respite in trading, however, marked a reversal of the recent downward trend and the list, as a whole, finished with moderate improvement.

Specialties led the mild advance. Utilities gathered strength as the week progressed, while oils and metals were generally narrow. Alcohols suffered neglect.

Glen Alden Coal recorded a new high for the year in an active turnover. New York and Honduras Rosalo also made a new 1934 top, although buying was restricted. Other firm spots included Greyhound Corporation, American Cyanamid B, American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share and Sherwin Williams.

Aluminum Co. of America recovered after a bad start, while Newmont Mining likewise erased an initial setback. Some of the oils and metals, including Lake Shore and Standard Oil of Indiana, finished virtually without change.

The trading fraternity was cheered by the report of a curb exchange seat sale at $30,000 which was $3,500 over the price paid in the previous transfer.

Stock sales for each full session average around 125,000 shares compared with an average of about 140,000 in the week previous.

Society Folk Escape Heat At Sea, Hills

Northern Resorts, Alien Lands and Western Areas Visited.

Many Stay Nearby, With Two Beaches Especially Popular.

Members of Washington society scatter to the four corners of the earth when summer arrives with its terrific heat. Many chose Northern watering resorts, others prefer the mountains, while still others wander to foreign lands and some enjoy going out West to see more of their own country. However, there are many who pick a resort close to Washington, so their husbands, who have to remain in town during the week may commute for week-ends. For several years there have been two favorite beach resorts, Virginia Beach, Va., and Rehoboth Beach, Del.

The first is just a delightful overnight trip down the Potomac aboard the Norfolk steamer, while a four-hour motor ride will take one to Rehoboth Beach.

Junior Horse Show.

At Virginia Beach the Cavalier Junior Horse Show, second of the annual horse shows to be held this year in the Cavalier show ring, concluded its program on July Fourth. The highest honors for the 69 entries were awarded to Virginia exhibitors. Among children from Washington who took part were little Francine Whitten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whitten, who are spending the summer there; Claire Snow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Snow, jr. The latter has leased a cottage for the season and Mr. Snow will join her for week-ends.

Over the week-end a round of teas, dinner dances and beach parties were arranged by members of the cottage colony in honor of visiting golfers, who had started to arrive for the Women's Tidewater Golf Association tournament at the Princess Anne Country Club, starting tomorrow. Many parties were attended by Army and Navy officers, who are stationed at the various Army posts and Navy yards. The fleet also contributes its quota of officers.

To Return Home.

Mrs. Campbell Pritchett and her niece, Miss Natalie Kenney, who spent the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whitten, will return to their home on Kalorama road today. Mr. Edward van Devanter, of Washington, also was there stopping at the Cavalier.

At the New Chamberlin, Old Point Comfort Beach, Va., there were a large number of entertainments over the week-end which were climaxed by a gala regatta ball last evening on the hotel roof garden in honor of those who came from all parts of the East to witness the Virginia Gold Cup speed boat race at Hampton Roads yesterday.

Commodore William Horn, of the Hampton Road Yacht Club, and Mrs. Horn headed the reception committee, which included Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Tracy, commanding the Third Corps Area, Coast Artillery, at Fort Monroe; Gen. Charles H. Danforth, commandant of Langley Field, and a number of city officials from Hampton Roads and Newport News.

Playing an Unnatural Contract.

In a recent Individual Tournament held at Crockford's Club in New York City, a hand was dealt on which only one of the teams arrived at the best contract. Since the game was being scored on the match point basis, many of the players made unnatural bids in an effort to score a "Howell Top." However, all of those players with one exception, instead of getting the top score that they were trying to attain, wound up very close to the bottom.

East, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

	♠ 8 7 ♡ J 5 3 ◇ A K Q J 10 6 ♣ 8 3
♠ Q 5 2 ♡ A K 8 4 ◇ 9 8 3 ♣ K Q 6		♠ A K J 10 ♡ Q 10 7 6 ◇ — ♣ A 9 5 4 2
	♠ 9 6 4 3 ♡ 9 2 ◇ 7 5 4 2 ♣ J 10 7

It is easily seen that seven hearts is a laydown on the hand, and the fulfillment of this contract depends only on a trump break. However, in a greedy effort to secure the honor score, a great many East players failed completely to support any heart bid made by West and, as a result, reached either a game or Slam contract in spades or a Small Slam contract in hearts. Only one team bid the Grand Slam in hearts.

Naturally, those players who played the hand at a spade contract received a diamond Opening, and the Declarer immediately had to face a very serious problem. At a contract of four spades in Rubber Bridge the proper procedure with a diamond Opening is to discard one heart and two clubs on the first three rounds of diamonds, thus insuring the contract of four spades, even against a 4-2 trump division.

However, at a six spade contract such tactics obviously could not be pursued. One East player playing at six spades received a diamond Opening, ruffed the first trick and, in desperation, then proceeded to play for a 3-3 spade break, despite the fact that the North player had bid diamonds up to five-odd, indicating an unbalanced distribution. Obviously, when the trumps did not break, poor East could only cash two heart tricks and three club tricks before South trumped in with the thirteenth trump and then proceeded to allow North to run several diamond tricks.

Believe it or not, however, one East player succeeded in finding the way to make six spades against a diamond Opening. How this particular East player guessed the winning line of play is more than I know—probably the opponents showed him their hands. At any rate, the play went as follows: A diamond was opened, and East trumped in with the spade 10. East immediately discarded the thought of playing for a 3-3 spade break, and proceeded to cash the Ace and King of hearts in Dummy. He then played the Ace and King of trumps in his own hand, leaving himself with the lone Jack in his own hand and the lone Queen in Dummy. He now proceeded to run his club suit. On the fourth club South had two possible lines of defense open to him—neither of which could bring about the defeat of the contract. Actually, South ruffed in on the fourth club, and Dummy over-trumped with the spade Queen. The Declarer now led a heart from Dummy, playing the Queen from his own hand, and South trumped. However, Declarer still had a trump left, and was able to claim the rest of the tricks.

Oriental Trend in Style Gives Way to Russian

Hollywood Forecasts for Fall: Abundance of Metal Cloth, Lots of Fur, Small Hats, Matching Coats and Dresses.

What will fall fashions do to the present mode of dress? Plenty, say the Hollywood stylists, who foresee a number of radical changes. This is the last of three articles on Hollywood styles.

HOLLYWOOD, July 5 (AP).—The Oriental influence in women's fashions is slowly giving way to the Russian. Yards and yards of metal cloths are already coming from the mills for late summer and fall wear. Coats will be swagger again. Furs will be worn for every occasion.

Such is a partial consensus of the forecasts of a half-dozen of movie land's leading style creators. Going further into their predictions, we learn that:

Hats will be small, because big hats would get in the way of the piles of fur which will adorn coats. Materials of a brittle nature will continue in favor, with organdies and organzas being supplanted by the subtler crispness of metal-threaded silk and wool.

One thing is certain, the very nature of these brittle and metal fabrics will tend to make women look plumper and interest in diets therefore probably will become greater.

Matching Coats.

Coats should harmonize with the gowns worn beneath them. This may be done either by means of color combinations or trimmings. Even evening gowns will be accompanied by matching wraps. Silver fox, broadtail and galyak will be among the popular skins.

As to detail: The corded trim, used by Norma Shearer in "Rip Tide," has already become a definite style feature. Her square hats are also finding their way into advance fashion showings.

The "more yardage" mode is demonstrated by Kitty Carlisle, whose gown of tan lace, interwoven with horsehair and gold thread, uses three times as much material as is actually necessary. A fad which is becoming popular was introduced by Bert Kelton. She wore bracelets of straw, of the same material and color as her hat. Practical as well as becoming are silk lounging pajamas to be worn over a bathing suit of matching material. The swim suit is lined with jersey.

Russian Tunics.

Many of the new costumes display tunics. This Russian invasion is due to a new interest in Russia, because of this Nation's official recognition, and the recent run of pictures of a Russian locale. The Oriental influence will be seen in hats for some time, the fashion men predict, with berets and turbans especially affected by this vogue.

Fall skirts, especially for formal wear, must be off the ground, without reaching ankle length. Whether the bell flare in skirts will continue or whether they will go practically straight remains problematical. To be fashionable, sleeves will be full at the elbows.

No one can account for the metal influence. But there will be plenty of metal, not only threaded through materials, but in accessories as well.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 to 8 a. m., from 12 noon to 2 p. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m.

Care should be exercised on this date not to overlook any appointment, as a loss of business might follow. Anything new in the line of merchandising or equipment should meet with a good reception on the part of prospective buyers.

Money should flow abundantly through channels which should prove beneficial for general trade. Any attempt at sharp practice in business will be detected, and the one trying it will suffer financial loss. Those engaged in selling should find this a very profitable day. A very auspicious day to make new friends and establish worthwhile contacts. Not a very good time to indulge in social activities, unless the engagement was previously made. Sentimental individuals may possibly receive very little encouragement to express their sentiments, and may display good judgment if they refrain from doing so. Gossiping might prove a dangerous pastime, so refrain from it.

The woman born on July 9, as a general thing, dislikes people intruding in her personal affairs, and resents being dictated to. If born on this date you are very versatile, almost too much so for your own good. You are inclined to have too many irons in the fire at the same time. You should meet with great success if you will concentrate all of your energy on doing one thing well, rather than trying to do many things with indifferent results. Unless you are very careful in your choice of a husband, discontent might follow marriage. The right sort of a husband, however, can bring you a great deal of happiness and possibly financial independence.

The child born on July 9, as it grows up, must learn not to be inattentive, either when holding a conversation or in the classroom. The art to concentrate is the most important thing to teach this child. As it grows older it may, as an excuse, offer the plea of being forgetful. By impressing on it that people who pay strict attention when being told something, never forget, this fault can be corrected. Children born on this date, as a rule, are of very bright mentality, and possess excellent traits of character.

The man born on July 9 will be very successful, if he selects the profession or business he knows he is best adapted to, and sticks to that. If born on this date you may be much better off financially in the long run if you do not let your friends tempt you to invest in things you know little or nothing about. The right woman should prove not only a great helpmate, but a good adviser for you.

Dancing Now A Sport, Not Just Pastime

Gets Honored Place on Physical Education Curricula.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

THERE'S a high board fence between the theater stage and the football field. But in the last few years the modern dance has found its way from the amusement program to the sports schedule.

The first school of the dance to be conducted along the lines of a graduate college opens this month. Teachers from schools and colleges all over the country have enrolled for summer work, in numbers that testify to the place that the dance has claimed in physical education.

The modern dance has come a long way from early days when nymphs in gauzy robes and garlands of artificial flowers danced along the seashore and through the rotogravure pages. Today, what is called the modern dance demands general body movement that is based on rigorous physical training. Its results in the way of coordination, control and intricate rhythm sense have made it a fundamental activity at the majority of women's colleges, notably Barnard, Smith and Wellesley. Vassar has replaced fundamental gymnastics with dancing, as a sports foundation.

The Bennington School of Dance, opening this month in Vermont at Bennington College, appeals definitely to teachers, because, in addition to classes in dancing, there will be theory courses and discussion groups, and demonstrations of different techniques.

Miss Martha Hill, head of the dance department of New York University and Bennington College, will be director of the new school, and Miss Mary Jo Shelly, head of physical education at New College, Columbia University, administrative director.

Mme. de Maintenon Knew This; She Managed to Marry a King

Louis the Fourteenth's Wife Advocated "Women With Clear Heads and Kind Thoughts"; She Had These Characteristics and Became Queen of France.

No matter how plain a woman is, no matter how few advantages she has enjoyed, she can, if she tries, have personality. There are many ways in which she can develop that magnetic something that draws other persons to her and that helps her to adjust herself to the relationships of a crowded world.

The following article is the seventh in a series dealing with the intangible elements of feminine attraction.

By Frances Mangum.

AS MODERN WOMEN delve deeper into a study of personality they find that winsome smiles, polished manners, and Paris gowns will carry them so far—but no farther.

They recognize a veneer for what it is worth, and seek to probe the underlying fundamentals. They say: "Yes; we must be kind, considerate, sympathetic—but how? How can one merely simulate these traits? Isn't there something even deeper—a kind of root to these things?"

Their search proves there is. They find all the real traits of character that make up genuine charm are based on the development of an inner self, and that personality without that inner something is like light without heat. They find true charm is of the spirit, and not the flesh.

What more classic example of this than Mme. de Maintenon, who, when she was 50 years old, won the affections of Louis XIV, King of France? Not only won him, but married him and exercised great influence on his character during their 30 years of life together.

Differed from Her Age.

Just how did she do this? Women of her day found it hard to explain for Mme. de Maintenon made no pretenses about her age, and wore clothes that made her a laughing stock. While the ladies of the court were glorifying in decolletage, and wantonly exposing shoulders and bosom, she seldom varied her high-necked, long-sleeved dress of dead leaf color. While they were reveling at balls and parties she was tutoring Louis' seven illegitimate children by his beautiful mistress, Mme. de Montespan.

Her conduct is best explained in her own words. She wrote: "Women of today are insupportable to me. Their absurd shocking way of dressing; their tobacco; their wine; their voracity; their bad manners, and their laziness are not only against my taste, but it seems to me against common sense. I can not stand them. I love intelligent, modest, sober women who are capable of earnest thoughts, yet bright and witty without giving offense, women with clear heads, and kind thoughts."

A Kingly Catch.

After 13 years the king broke with Mme. de Montespan and dismissed her from his court. Maintenon remained to instruct and care for the royal children. Three years later Louis' wife died and he became the matrimonial catch of Europe. Not only court ladies, but princesses from all the European powers were scrambling for his affections and the title that went with them.

At this time Louis was 47 years old, and one of the handsomest and most captivating men in France. His court was the most brilliant in Europe. Strangely enough he disdained all offers of remunerative and powerful alliances and chose the middle-aged governess for his wife.

He recognized in her the stability, the truth, and genuine sympathy he needed. Her strength of spirit far outshone all the glamour that surrounded the princesses and court ladies. She possessed an intelligence and character that "age could not dim nor custom stale."

And so it is today. The woman who wants to be remembered beyond tomorrow, will never cease to develop and rely on that inner something some people call mind, others soul, and some spirit.

Conviction of Joy.

Dr. A. Maris Boggs, internationally known economist, fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, member of the Academy of World Economics, and the Academy of Political and Social Sciences, and founder of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, feels that an inner conviction of joyousness gives a woman a core around which to strengthen her personality.

"And of course," she said, "that inner conviction of joyousness can only come from a realization and appreciation of good.

"When a person is able to look around on all sides and seek good she feels an overwhelming thankfulness—joy."

Dr. Boggs said she had often found this quality in humble Bedouin women of the desert.

Mrs. Oliver Hart, wife of the minister of St. John's Church, believes girls should cultivate an interest in the spiritual side of life while they are still young.

"If they do," she said, "it gives them a strength to meet difficulties gracefully and well. In almost all cases it will foster contentment, bring sweetness and unselfishness.

"Besides," she continued, "a woman who has developed this inner part of herself is always sympathetic, and through her sympathy is able to help others."

Does the woman in the business world need to cultivate a "business personality"? Find the answer in tomorrow's Post in the eighth article of this series.

PILLAR TO POST

Expecting a Trip.

WASHINGTON residential society will mourn one of its most colorful personalities when Mrs. Edmund Brewer Montgomery leaves with her State Department husband for a foreign post. Their orders are expected some time this month, and though she will miss her friends very much, Nancy is looking forward to her unknown destination with the tense expectancy of a child holding the ribbon of a Jack Horner pie.

• • • •

But it is this "here today and gone tomorrow" aspect of Washington Nancy has deplored in the past, and for that reason she has cultivated more friends in the residential set than in diplomatic circles, where her husband's connections might naturally have led her.

Before her marriage a year ago she was the very popular widow, Mrs. Mark Reid Yates, whose spacious home on Massachusetts avenue was the center for a smart, gay group. But she has more than her charming smile and flair for entertaining to recommend her; she is considered one of the most astute business women in Washington.

• • • •

The talent was no doubt inherited from her mother, who managed an iron ore, steel business, the stocks and bonds left by her husband; managed them with such skill she was consulted as an authority by some of the biggest men in Philadelphia. Lucy Sellers, a graduate of Vassar in 1875, an "iron woman" and unusual for her day, bequeathed to her daughter Nancy much of her indomitable, steely spirit. When 20 years old, Nancy's mother died, leaving her alone to manage the fortune, and the Sellers estate that had come down to her intact, an original grant of land from William Penn.

Knows Her Business.

AS evidence of her business ability is the Collingwood Tea House that she owns, which was her home for a long time after she married Mr. Yates, a "gentleman farmer." It stands upon the land known as the "River Farm," formerly owned by Gen. George Washington.

• • • •

It derives its name from Admiral Collingwod, hero of the battle of Trafalgar. He assumed command of the British fleet upon the death of Lord Nelson. The part played by his flagship, the Royal Sovereign, in this engagement, is one of the proud traditions of the British navy. Mount Vernon was named after Admiral Vernon, of the same service.

• • • •

Located upon this property, a short distance from the Tea House, is the spring called by the Indians the "Great Fountain." This water was so esteemed for its purity that captains of English vessels sailing from Alexandria in Colonial times anchored off Collingwood for the purpose of replenishing their water supply against the long trip across the Atlantic. These waters, clear and cold, still pour from the hillside just as they did in Colonial times. All drinking water served to guests at Collingwood Tea House is drawn from this famous spring.

Apartment houses are included in Mrs. Montgomery's other business interests. She personally supervises their management.

Mme. Curie's Daughter Studies Radio Activity

Irene Curie, daughter of Mme Marie Curie, the famous scientist who died recently, is on the way to discover the cause of radio activity in nature.

Mlle. Curie worked on this problem with her mother, and is now continuing it alone. She spends many hours daily in the quiet laboratory of the Radium Institute in Paris. And she confidently believes some day she will be able to tell the world what regulates radio activity, why it works with such clock-like regularity.

Should Middle-Aged Woman Marry Man Who's Twenty-Five?

By Mary Haworth.

MY DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You will probably laugh at my problem. Sometimes I laugh at it myself. And sometimes I cry over it. You see I'm an unmarried woman 44 years old—I suppose most people would call me middle-aged. And now a boy of 25 swears he loves me and wants to marry me. It seems hard to believe, I know, but he has finally convinced me he actually cares for me.

• • • •

We met in a hospital. I'm a nurse and a member of this boys' family was one of my patients. That was over a year ago. But ever since our first meeting the young man in question has been devoted to me. He says he will never love another woman as he does me. Do you think we have any chance for happiness together? He makes a good salary and if I married him I would stop nursing and spend all my time in making a pleasant home for him. I'm really awfully fond of him. I can no longer doubt his love for me. And I dread growing old alone. What do you think? PERPLEXED.

Accept the Challenge.

DEAR PERPLEXED: There is that between the lines of your letter which leads me to believe you are a person of courage, humor and common sense; that you have your feet on the ground; that you are not coy; that emotionally you are your own woman.

It may very well be that the man in the case has been won and held by these sturdy, wholesome attributes of character, rather than the too-often evanescent physical appeal a woman nearer his own age might have exerted over him. Moreover, it seems safe to assume that he has a mental maturity in advance of his years, since he dares to run counter to youth's popular conception of romance as being embodied in Sweet Sixteen.

• • • •

I believe if I were in your place I'd marry the man. I don't hold out to you any hope of enduring happiness. That can't be promised for the most romantic and conventionally suitable union, and certainly not for a June-and-December alliance, where the woman is the older. But "he either fears his fate too much, or his desserts are small, who dares not put it to the touch, to win or lose it all."

If you have the courage to embrace this opportunity for adventurously questing after happiness, knowing that the cards are stacked against you; if you are prepared to pay your losses in heartache, if later the man tells you he has made a mistake—then you probably have the stuff in you to make the gamble less uneven.

The fact that the man is more deeply in love with you than you with him gives certain odds in your favor. If you were the one most deeply in love—less able to stand off and analyze the situation objectively, as you show a capacity for doing—you might at once fall into a serious error of consuming jealousy of younger women.

If you do marry him, may I offer one suggestion? Never try to compete with younger women on their plane. Be your age, and act your age. Keep your mental poise. Therein, I think, is the secret of your charm for the man.

'White Plague' Child Victims Rest at Camp

Five-Year-Old Says "Too Much Resting; All Day and More at Night."

THIN little bodies browned by the sun, little stomach bulging proudly with the many glasses of milk consumed at lunch, the 150 children at the tuberculosis camp on Upshur street lie outdoors on camp cots in the hot summer afternoons and rest.

"That's what I don't like about this place," confided a freckled 5-year-old boy yesterday afternoon. "Too much resting. Rest all day and then rest some more at night. But I guess my daddy would like that. All he does is work and eat."

Happily unconscious that they are different from other children who go camping these little victims of the white plague spend three months at the camp each summer. There they are kept on a strict schedule, attended by nurses and physicians, started on the road to recovery.

Founded in 1908.

Since 1908 tubercular children of the District have been cared for in this camp. Funds from private subscriptions, the sale of tubercular seals and public funds, have financed the camp.

But this year there is little money in the camp treasury and unless more subscriptions are received the camp will have to be closed and the sick little boys and girls returned to their homes in Washington's slums and alleys. To many of them this will mean certain death.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, director general of the Tuberculosis Association, yesterday sat in one of the nurses' tents, and told something of the work done at the camp. A few minutes earlier, Mrs. Grant, who had been ill a few days, had passed among the rows of cots, and had been joyously greeted by the children. "Welcome home," cried one engaging youngster. "Are you better now?" queried another anxiously.

Plague Hits Family.

"See those children?" she said, indicating three sleeping on cots side by side. "They are all brothers and sisters. Every child in the family is infected, for the disease is highly contagious.

"Sometimes the cases are arrested by a summer in camp. But they should have year-round treatment. Even in the camp we only treat a small percentage of the sick. There are almost 1,400 tubercular children in Washington, and we can only care for 150 in the camp. We take those we can help the most, and hope the summer of rest and care will help them fight the disease."

Billy, one of the most famous campers, lay stretched out in the sun. Last year Billy decorated the Christmas seal. This is his third summer at camp.

"I came here when I was only 3," he said, expanding his 6-year-old chest. "Now I am a big boy. I like it here, but," his face was a little wistful, "sometimes I miss my mother."

Soprano Will Make Her Operatic Debut

She's Louise Baer, Who Didn't Like Piano.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 6 (AP). A girl who couldn't "get along" with her piano lessons, but who dreamed that some day she'd be an opera singer, is about to see her dreams come true.

Louise Baer, daughter of Cameron Baer, Harrisburg telephone official, will make her debut as "Miscalla" in "Carmen" at the opening of the summer season in Asbury Park, N. J., next Friday.

The young soprano displayed talent even before she reached the high school age, but efforts to train her at the piano were futile.

When she should have been at the keys, her parents explained, Louise could be found deep in study of the life and career of Geraldine Farrar.

So they sent her to Dresden, Germany, where she studied for two years under Fritz Busch.

Miss Baer later became a concert singer and a member of the New York Grand Opera Co.

She's an out-of-doors girl, enjoys swimming, but she likes singing, especially "La Boheme."

The High Cost Of Chic Drops To New Lows

Price of Cosmetic Kits for Beach Use One Good Indication.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NOT LONG AGO a customer standing by the counter of a downtown store remarked: "It not only pays to be smart, but you pay to be smart."

She was looking at some cork beach kits, perfectly lovely things, with long rope handles, so you can sling them over your shoulders like binoculars. They contained just about everything, all preparations of a most reputable make. But the price was $10. And, of course, $10 is $10.

She wasn't the only admiring customer who felt these delightful things were slightly beyond her means. As the buyer of that department said, women came and women went, but very few bought.

But a week or so later came a new era in cork kits, when they came within reach of the budgeted purse. The kits featured in an F street shop are only one dollar. They include a sun-tan oil, a liquid cleansing cream, a box of sun-tan face powder, and a small container of paste rouge, all the essentials for keeping well groomed during a day at the beach.

A kit of this sort has a double appeal, in its essential contents and attractive appearance. Remember, it pays to be smart—and here's an instance where one pays little for smartness!

• • • •

Belts and Belts.

Every day women walk by the belt departments in different stores without realizing that within arm's reach are several keynotes of smartness. A belt can do a lot. It can change an uninspiring dress into one with definite chic. It can tone down a fussy frock. It can be a finishing touch.

One downtown store is more or less specializing in white belts. They have them in patent leather, string and combinations. One of their most attractive belts, which would suit a plain white silk, is made of plaited strips of patent leather. Most are solid white, but others in lovely soft colors are interplaited. These are unusually inexpensive. Also modestly priced are some white string and brown patent leathers.

• • • •

Breakfast in Bed.

These tropical days it isn't hard to imagine a lot of people prefer to lie in bed and have their breakfast served there. But it isn't likely many of them have the necessary conveniences.

And yet why not? They certainly aren't expensive. And this touch of luxury is worth the little it costs! A Connecticut avenue shop is selling a one-service breakfast set at a 10 per cent discount. It includes a large plate, a cereal bowl, hot or cold milk pitcher, bread and butter plate, cup and saucer, toast plate, cream and sugar set, tea pot and egg cup. What could be more complete?

Naturally, breakfast should look tempting. And it certainly would in this colored Italian pottery.

A set of this kind is a nice present for an invalid who has to take all his or her meals in bed.

Dog's Good Life.

A dog's life has a lot to be said for it. How many typists who sit in front of their machines from early morning until late afternoon plodding through one dreary letter after another hadn't rather be home — playing with a rubber bone if she had to? How many travelers who agonize from hard hotel beds to stuffy Pullman uppers wouldn't much prefer the puppy's couch?

The sporting goods department of a downtown store is selling dog beds and mattresses for modest sums. The beds are of natural finish bamboo woven with green rattan. The mattresses are filled with kapok, and covered with green or red material. They come in either 21, 23 or 25-inch sizes.

Cool Cleanser.

No woman should go from morning till night without giving her face at least a surface cleansing. If she just "doesn't bother" her pores will become enlarged, blackheads will put in an appearance and her skin will become generally muddy and coarse.

There's a certain skin freshener which is a delightful cleanser. The minute the cooling, clear liquid is applied with a small cotton puff the skin immediately feels reinvigorated. It purges the pores of dust and does a thorough clean-up job. Furthermore it acts as a mild astringent with a tendency to tighten the skin and close the pores.

This skin tonic, as it's called, answers the need of women who do not care to use so much cleansing cream in the summer. Those with particularly oily skins will find it a grand relief.

Business women should keep a bottle tucked away in desk drawers and make a habit of using it every afternoon. They will find it a welcome convenience if they plan to go from the office to dinner and want to do a bit of brushing up first.

As for housewives, if they rush in from a busy day in town and have to freshen up in a hurry, this quick cleanser is a real boon.

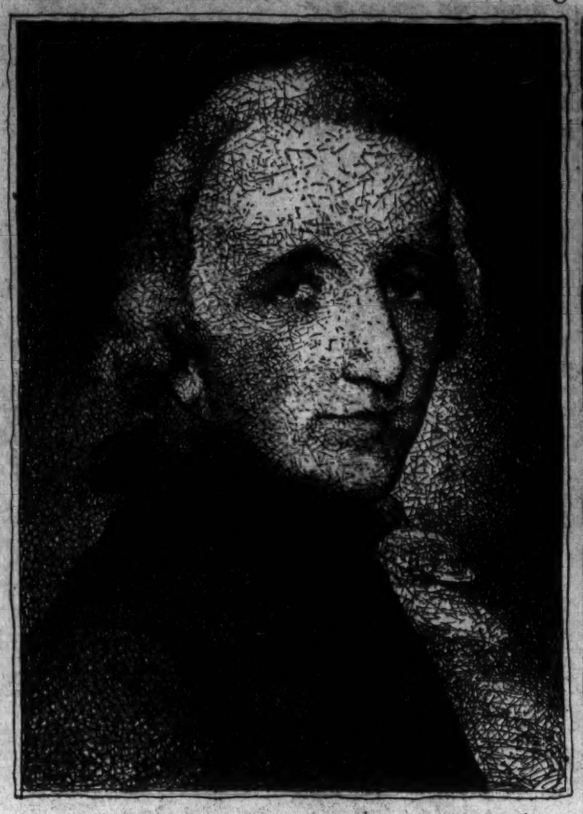
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

William Armstrong—Margaret Marshall



PEGGY MARSHALL conducted her affairs of the heart on an international scale. First it was a dashing Spaniard, Don Francisco Rendon, who caught her fancy. When she was a belle of New York in Revolutionary times, one of the most charming and noticed girls of the town, he was Secretary to the Spanish Legation there. But he returned to Spain and pretty Margaret fell in love with a Scotchman, William Armstrong. He fought against her country in the War of 1812, but she managed to preserve her devotion to both husband and America.

Society of Their Times Was Thrilling With War in Offing.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

TRUE love laughs not only at locksmiths but at race and creed as well. Often in the history of mankind, men and women of nations opposing each other on the battlefield have found it possible to set aside National prejudices for the sake of love.

Many a British officer in the days when the henchmen of George III of England were fighting the valiant American colonists, felt his anger melting away as the snow before the sun in the bright smile of a colonial belle. And, even as poppies spring up so quickly on the battlefield, romance blossoms after the battles are over and done.

There was a certain John Ramsay, a gentleman with residences in New York and Philadelphia, who adored his two stepdaughters, Margaret and Janet Marshall. His affection was returned by his young charges, for it is recorded "he was the kindest man we ever knew, we all loved him."

It was during the Revolution. The talk of the moment was of the breath-taking events transpiring on all sides. Through a series of letters passing between Miss Abigail De Hart and Miss Peggy Marshall we catch glimpses of how thrilling the war made the social life of the times.

Margaret Marshall confided to Abigail that her heart had been captured by a certain Spanish gentleman of high rank, Don Francisco Rendon, who was Spanish Consul in Philadelphia. They met in Philadelphia and the Spaniard fell madly in love with the American belle.

After John Ramsay and his family moved to New York, where he was called by his business as an importer, the affair between Rendon and Margaret appeared to have reached the state of engagement. By this time the Revolution was over and the new Nation was in process of formation. When the news came that Congress was to move to New York, Ramsay knew that he had chosen his place of residence wisely.

Fair Scottish Soldier.

Not to be outdone Rendon followed, renting a magnificent house at No. 1 Broadway for the Spanish Legation. He accompanied there the new Spanish Minister Don Diego de Gardoqui as Secretary of the Legation. Margaret and he were happy over their reunion.

It is now time to leave them there for a space and introduce the other party in this Colonial romance.

With Sir Henry Clinton, in 1776, had come to New York William Armstrong, of the well-known Scotch family by that name. This dark-eyed Scottish soldier was fair to look upon in his scarlet coat and handsome uniform. He soon found the ladies of New York, those loyal to the crown and those who cheered for the colonies as well, amenable to his wiles. Anyway, he himself fell captive to the charms of Christian Amiel, said to be the daughter of a New York Tory, of French extraction. They married, had three children and then she died, leaving Maj. Armstrong desolate and their children motherless. Before this time Maj. Armstrong had been stationed at Halifax, Canada, but he resigned his commission in the British army and took up business life in New York.

It was after his wife's death he met Margaret Marshall, the toast of the town. Rendon had returned to Spain. When the eighteenth century turned into its last decade, those most important nineties, the romance between him and Miss Marshall had lost most of its fervor. Margaret was dreaming of a dark-eyed Scotsman with three motherless children on his hands needing care.

Business Difficulties.

In 1791 the engagement with Rendon was definitely off.

Within a few years Margaret met and married Maj. William Armstrong. Their romance began with a chance meeting, as the widower was seeking to assuage his grief with social distractions. Margaret, once more fancy free, had decided "not to marry for years and years." But the dashing British officer soon made her change her mind. While all New York looked on and wondered and her many swains talked bitterly of "the enemy," Margaret took her new lover to the altar and he was no longer a disconsolate widower.

They Flourished in the Days When Washington Was Frivolous.

Business and William Armstrong did not prove as congenial as they might have been. He found it difficult to establish himself firmly. Perhaps he discovered, as have so many retired military men, that his heart was with his first love, the Army, after all. Then he went into business with a certain Theophylact Bache, a well-known New York Tory, and times were more prosperous.

Margaret was loyal to him through his business difficulties. Their first son, Edward, was born, and their home was a center of hospitality. But the years went on and brought war in the air again. A British officer must return to the colors in time of trouble, so we find Maj. Armstrong in March, 1812, back in the British service, with Margaret and the children established in Elisabeth Town and he in upper Canada.

Again and again Col. Armstrong planned to have his wife and children join him in Kingston and the other posts at which he was stationed in Canada. But the plans never materialized. Mrs. Armstrong and the children, Edward, Margaret, Rose and Charles, stayed on at Elisabeth Town, their situation not in the least complicated by the fact that the husband and father was a British officer and fighting against the United States. Margaret did not change in devotion to her husband, although she dearly loved her own country.

When the War of 1812 was lost by the British, Col. Armstrong wound up his affairs in Canada and returned to his family. Fighting days were over now for him. He settled down happily in Elisabeth Town, content with the companionship of his "dearest Margaret" and his children. They had many peaceful years together.

The last glimpse we catch of him is through the eyes of a young relative, who wrote he was "an old gentleman with a black patch over one eye. He would give a finger to me and a finger to Charlie and we would walk down to the river, and he would give us peppermints —in those days peppermints came stuck in rows on paper."

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

In Sunday's instalment of this fact story, the author told of the sufferings of himself and her husband at the hands of the Soviets from the time of the birth of her son, in 1918, following the revolution. In book form this biography is the best-selling book of non-fiction in the United States today. The Washington Post offers its readers an opportunity to read the book while it is still the talk of the reading world. As today's instalment begins, the author and her husband are talking of the way charges against the intellectuals were falsified in order to achieve their downfall. Now go on with the story.

"FACTS! It isn't a question of facts!" my husband said jerkily. "They wouldn't scruple to invent them. Such absurd accusations . . . "criticizing the rate at which the work was proceeding" . . . "having no faith in the Soviet government"s economic policy. These are crimes indeed! But that's not the point," he concluded gloomily.

"What is it then?"

He passed me the paper and began nervously underlining with his nail separate words and phrases:

"Ryazantsev . . . 'I have always been an enemy of the Soviet government.' Karatygin . . . 'I have been drawn into the wreckers' organization by Prof. Ryazantsev.' Levandovsky . . . 'before I say anything about the wrecking' . . . Kuranov . . . "passing to my activities as a wrecker" . . . Drosdov . . . "I belonged to an organization of wreckers" . . .'

"They go on like this, every one of them! They've all been made to say the same thing," said my husband.

Separation Sad.

"Still, I can't understand how they could confess. Even under the threat of death. To make such confessions is as good as signing one's own death sentence," I said, trying to shut out the obvious reflection that the whole point was the impudence with which the thing was stage-managed.

"One's own death doesn't matter, but what about one's family?"

"How do you mean? They are not after the families, surely? What use are we to them? And what can be more terrible for a family than to lose a father?"

My husband shrugged his shoulders.

"Surely they can't shoot them!" I persisted. "Even if Ryazantsev gets ten years' penal servitude, others will get five, and the rest may be simply sent into exile; after all, most of them were as good as in exile before—at Murmansk or on the Caspian—they can't send them much further, can they?"

Political Terrorism.

"Yes, they can—to the next world."

"But why? What sense is there in destroying people who worked, invented new methods, created new branches of Soviet industry?" I asked helplessly.

"Why? To begin with because the five-year plan can not be carried out and they have to justify themselves somehow in the eyes of the workmen and the foreigners, and secondly, the OGPU has been hard hit by the timber works being closed; they can't get credits if they don't frighten the government. Or perhaps they simply want unpaid labor—I can't tell I know nothing about politics."

Death to Wreckers.

After office hours in all government institutions, factories and even schools, compulsory meetings were held at which "unanimous" resolutions demanding death sentence for the accused had to be passed. After the meetings the people were made to march in rows along the streets carrying placards hastily made of red cotton bearing inscriptions in black:

"The veriet of the working class is unalterable—the wreckers must be wiped off the face of the earth."

"Death to the wreckers!"

"Death to the counter-revolutionaries!"

"Death to all the enemies of the Soviets!"

At those meetings wives, sisters, fathers, brothers, even children, had to vote for the immediate death-sentence on their near and dear ones who had been arrested in hundreds during the preceding few days. Those who ventured not to hold up their hands in favor of the death sentence were immediately summoned to the "local committee," cross-examined and told that they would have to leave their posts.

"Remember, those who are not with us are against us," was the concluding remark of the examining officer.

Sent Into Exile.

Several workmen and simple-hearted Communists asked whether there would be a legal trial for the accused, and wondered why "the wreckers" had been tolerated for so many years. They were at once summoned to the "party committee," then sent to prison and afterwards into exile. All the others kept a frightened silence as though they had themselves been sentenced to death and with pale, designed faces marched behind the blood-red placards.

There were two more days of ominous newspaper hysteria, ferocious speeches at the meetings "to stir up public opinion," and OGPU motors hooting day and night as they rushed about the streets collecting their victims and terrorizing the population. On September 25 the awful list was published:

(1) A. V. Ryazantsev, professor, gentleman by birth, member of the board of directors of the Central Cold Storage Trust . . . founder of the counter-revolutionary organization.

(2) E. S. Karatygin, professor, chairman of the agricultural section . . . leader of the counter-revolutionary organization.

(3) M. Z. Karpenko, gentleman by birth, head engineer of the cold storage center . . . organizer of wrecking activities at the cold storage center.

(4) S. P. Nikitin, deputy chairman of the Volga-Caspian Fisheries Trust . . . leader of counter-revolutionary activities there.

(5) P. I. Karpov, technical director of the Net & Tackle Trust . . . organizer of wrecking the work of the trust.

(6) Shcherbakov, managing director of the Northern Fisheries trust. . . .

and so on, 48 names—48 men full of life, men of exceptional knowledge and experience—and one short phrase "to be shot."

(To be continued tomorrow).

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Clean Swimming Pools.

Everyone should know how to swim. In recent years there has been a great increase in the popularity of swimming for exercise and recreation. As a result, hundreds of swimming pools have been constructed and bathing beaches on public waters have been planned and equipped.

Of those who frequent the waters of public swimming pools or beaches all are not equally clean. Some may carry disease. Unless the water is purified by some chemical agent or is changed with great frequency, such persons constitute a possible source of infection for others. In spite of crowding, if the water is constantly being aerated through the breaking of waves, there is comparatively little danger, for the organic matter from the bodies of bathers is oxidized with fair rapidity. In a quiet pool, however, the danger increases with the concentration of bathers.

Too few persons live in the vicinity of unpolluted lakes or along our ocean coastlines, and municipal, school and private pools must be relied upon to furnish the larger proportion of our population with bathing facilities. In order to avoid infection, all pools must be closely watched for too high a concentration of bacteria. The water must be changed or disinfected and the pool cleaned at frequent intervals.

Some form of chlorine serves as a satisfactory bathing pool disinfectant. The organic material, however, from the bodies of bathers rapidly absorbs chlorine so that a pool that is perfectly safe at 2 in the afternoon, if generously used, may be dangerous a few hours later. Hence, chlorine should be added during the use of the pool in such amounts as may be required.

Art of Making Left-Overs Attractive Something Cooks Must Know.

By Susan Mills.

SUNDAY left-overs. The refrigerator's full of them; bowls of this and that waiting to be made interesting and appetizing for Monday's dinner.

It is, perhaps, as great an art to make a left-over attractive as it is to prepare a masterpiece with fresh ingredients. Particularly when the family is small, the use of left-overs should be carefully planned.

An idea or two? Try these:

Chicken and Vegetable Salad.

1½ cups cold cooked chicken, diced
¾ cup celery, diced
¾ cup cold boiled potatoes, diced
¾ cup cold cooked peas
2 small fresh tomatoes, skinned and diced
1 cup mayonnaise

Combine ingredients in order given. Chill. Serve on crisp lettuce with additional mayonnaise and slices of hard-cooked egg as garnish. Serves 6.

Roast Beef Salad.

½ teaspoon horseradish
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper
Dash of paprika
½ cup cooked potatoes, diced
2 cups cooked string beans
1 cup cooked roast beef, diced
1 tablespoon vinegar

Blend mayonnaise, horseradish, vinegar, salt, pepper and paprika. Combine with potatoes and beans (cut lengthwise and then crosswise into ¾-inch pieces). Chill until ready to serve. Add beef and toss together lightly. Serve on crisp lettuce with radish roses. Serves 6.

Codes' Cut in Working Hours Helps Factory Women's Health

IMPROVEMENT in the health of women workers in factories, stores and laundries has been one of the greatest benefits of the shorter work-week in the opinion of Miss Mary Anderson, head of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Today will mark the first anniversary of the adoption of the first code, that for cotton textiles. Miss Anderson feels the 40-hour week in the cotton mills which supplanted the 55-hour one has been of particular value to the women workers. She said:

"The individual and social cost of the former long hours would be staggering were there any way of estimating the sum total of costs in health to the hundreds of thousands of women who have had to pay the price of excessive work schedules in the past.

"Losses due to the wear and tear of long hours upon human beings, industry has neglected to count, though it has always carefully considered the cost of wear and tear on machines.

"Let me illustrate with the case of an individual woman who came to my attention recently. For 20 years, from the time she was 14 years old she had worked in factories for 54 or 56 hours weekly. Then when the code for her industry was formulated and adopted, her working time was reduced to eight hours a day and five days a week. In three months she gained 20 pounds. She said, 'I never had so much time to rest before.'

"I believe that the shorter work schedule is even more welcome to women than to men, since so many women, single as well as married ones, must perform home duties before and after factory hours. This really means a double job for many women.

"The 40-hour week required by most of the codes, and particularly the 35-hour week adopted by some of the clothing trades, give women more time for many other things, impossible with the 54 or 60 hour schedule, such as recreation and relaxation, for example. And many women workers now have chance for educational or cultural activities, as well as matters of citizenship. In other words they have more opportunity at last for well-rounded interests, so necessary in the development of normal human beings."

Near-Blind Can Read Newsprint

Mirroscope Spectacles Magnify Immensely.

NEAR-BLIND persons are able to enjoy almost normal vision by the use of new glasses called mirroscope spectacles. Invented by Dr. William Feinbloom, of New York City, the glasses magnify an object 3½ times, increase the sharpness of vision 250 per cent.

The spectacles consist of two very small metal mirrors and lenses which make tube-like affairs almost an inch long. Ordinary frames may be used for these glasses which enable persons with defective eyesight to read fine newsprint.

Wine Parties Newer Than Cocktail Variety

Paris (AP).—Wine parties are something new sponsored by smart hostesses here to take the place of cocktail parties. One widely known hostess in the Etoile quarter recently gave a late afternoon party at which she served the wines and champagnes of France instead of gin mixtures.

A process for preparation of crystalline magnesium xylonate, used for tanning and dyeing in place of magnesium sulphate, has been patented by Horace S. Isbell, Agriculture.

John F. Barghausen (*), Agriculture, has invented a hand-operated inking and marking machine for marking the carcasses of animals.

A. Prescott Whittier, of New York, has been appointed a member of the Code Authority for the Wholesaling or Distributing Trade by National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson. Mr. Whittier succeeds Paul N. Gadebusch, who resigned.

Pope Allows Use Of Name in Drive On Indecent Films

Vatican City, July 8 (AP).—Pope Pius today granted Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, the privilege of using his name as a "whole-hearted supporter" of the campaign of American bishops against indecent motion pictures.

"His Holiness once more discussed our campaign with me and said I could use his name in its support," said the cardinal after an hour-long farewell interview with the Pope this morning.

"He once more assured me of his approval and gave his apostolic benediction to the undertaking," added Cardinal Dougherty, to whom the Pope gave assurances that his prayers are for success of the campaign.

The cardinal discussed spiritual and other problems of the United States with the pontiff.

After the audience, Cardinal Dougherty presented his niece, Mrs. Mary Boyland, of Philadelphia, and her children.

Cardinal Dougherty plans to leave Rome Tuesday, stopping at Florence, Turin and various other points before sailing for home on the Olympic August 22.

Immanuel Kant, famous German philosopher, who was born in 1724, led a life characterized by simplicity and regularity. He arose every morning, winter and summer, for 30 years, sharply at 5 o'clock, ate one regular meal at noon and walked for an hour rain or shine.

Although he was kind-hearted and high-minded, he was almost wholly lacking in sentiment. He lived for 80 years at Konigsberg, an important seaport city in east Prussia, yet never sailed on the Baltic. He apparently cared little for the beauties of nature, for in all his life he was never more than 40 miles from his birthplace.

He had no interest in music and little in poetry. As a teacher he worked chiefly with students of average ability, holding that the geniuses did not need his attention and the weaklings did not merit it. Kant never visited his friends when they were ill, and never spoke of them after their death.

MEET GUY BUSH... star pitcher for the Chicago Cubs! Guy won 20 games last year... pitched in all 264 innings... and he's pitching at an .800 clip this year. Like many athletes, Guy has found that at the end of a gruelling match, nothing brings back his energy and vitality like a Camel.

YOU TOO can increase Vim and Energy...quickly!

When you feel "used up"—smoke a Camel! Fatigue and irritability fade away. Your flow of natural energy snaps back to a higher level in a few minutes.

This experience is well known to millions of Camel smokers. It has been confirmed by a famous New York research laboratory. Take for example Guy Bush. There's a lesson in what Guy has to say about the "energizing effect" in Camels:

"Bases full, one out, and a strike. I'm watching the bases and the batter, too. Now I've got to pitch. The pitch—and it's two strikes! Will he strike out? You think so...and yet you can't tell. Baseball is full of tough spots that take it out of a pitcher who works his regular turn and stands up to the grind for seven long months.

"Like most of the big-league pitchers, I smoke Camels. And when I come out of a game after nine hard innings there's nothing that lifts up my energy the way a Camel does. I feel freshened up in no time at all. I smoke a lot. Camels never interfere with my nerves!"

Learn to "get a lift with a Camel" whenever your energy runs low. Smoke as constantly as you like. The finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS in Camels never upset the nerves.

Bryan 'Bitsy' Grant Decisively Wins U. S. Clay Courts Net Title

Cronin, Terry Both Predict Triumph

Odds Favor Americans, But Surprising Shift Is Made to Foes.

Hubbell - Gomez Duel an Important Angle to '34 Classic.

NEW YORK, July 8 (AP).—To hear the rival managers tell about it, neither the American nor the National League can lose the all-star game to be played in the Polo Grounds Tuesday.

"Gomez is just a fast-ball pitcher and we like speed," says Bill Terry, manager of the World Champion New York Giants and master mind of the National League forces. "We'll win this one."

"Do I think we will win?" asks Joe Cronin, Terry's managerial rival in the world series last fall and pilot of the American Leaguers. "Look at that line-up and tell me how we can lose."

Some Critics Swing.

Although the betting odds find the American League in the favorite's position, there has been a surprising swing toward the older circuit among competent baseball critics. Some of these frankly have confessed they were stringing along with Terry because of his gift of getting the most out of available material as well as because of his so-called "luck."

But admittedly anything can happen in a game where every man is a star of the first magnitude, where clouters feared far and wide match wits with the sport's finest pitchers—Vernon (Goofy) Gomez, Mel Harder, Red Ruffing, Tommy Bridges and Jack Russell, of the American League squad, and Carl Hubbell, Lon Warneke, Dizzy Dean, Van Mungo and Fred Frankhouse for the National.

Hubbell-Gomez Duel.

Not the least of the many attractive angles of the classic will be the southpaw duel between Hubbell and Gomez. They probably will pitch the first three innings, with Gabby Hartnett and Bill Dickey the prospective starting catchers.

Terry's starting line-up, as announced, will be remarkable because of the almost solid wall of right-handed hitters he will toss against Gomez. The infield of Terry, Frank Frisch, Pie Traynor and Travis Jackson, the outfield of Hazen Cuyler, Joe Medwick and Wally Berger, and the battery of Hubbell and Hartnett, contains eight men who bat from the right side of the plate, Terry himself being the lone exception. Al Lopez, who may get the call over Harbnett, likewise bats right-handed, but Army Vaughan, who may start at shortstop, is a southpaw hitter.

Six Portside Batters.

Cronin's starting American League line-up contains six left-handed batsmen—Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Charley Gehringer, Heinie Manush, Bill Dickey and Gomez—and three right, Cronin, Frank Higgins and Al Simmons.

A turn-out filling every one of the 53,602 seats apparently is assured. If so, the receipts would reach about $60,000, compared with the $42,000 the first all-star game drew at Chicago last year. The bulk of the receipts goes to the Players Benevolent Fund.

gives stage of the proceedings. His fast one had more hops than the boss' beer and his curves would have shamed Mae West.

Then I might refer you to the New York's runty third baseman, John Saltzgaver, for another cause incidental to the Nats' defeat. Saltzy pounded out four hits in as many tries and drove in three runs.

But I have forgotten about the sage of right field who should be resting easily in a home for aged if his critics are right—the Babe. The fat man plunked his thirteenth home run of the season high up in the right-field bleachers, scoring Saltzy ahead of him, and finished his usual seven-inning tour of duty with a lusty double to center, scoring the aforementioned Saltzy again. In all he drove in four of the Yanks' six runs. From a strictly Washington viewpoint their act was as entertaining as a busted radio. Ruth is sorry to see the Nats leave, for he needs only one more circuit drive to realize his ambition of socking 700. The Bambino's work was by way of celebrating the twentieth anniversary of his entry into the big leagues.

Following their usual custom, your Washington champions kindled the bright fire of hope in the breasts of some 19 Washingtonians present, assuming their usual 1-0 lead in their first turn at bat, thanks to Heinrich Manush's first clout.

Tie Score in Second.

The hosts came right back in their half and tied the score on hits by Crosetti and Saltzgaver, intermingled with an infield out. It was nip and tuck for one inning, but in the third Heffner and Saltzgaver joined hands in shoving over another run, putting Washington one back.

That third was a classic, and every sack on the diamond had an occupant when the final putout was made. A wild pitch, passed ball and a free ticket to Ruth helped the New Yorkers and added to the confusion and consternation of your favorites. Chapman conveniently grounded to Travis for a force-out at third ending the inning.

I already have reported how Ruth produced the next two runs before Cronin's gang could muster another score. Manush's second homer into the bleachers turned the trick, but unfortunately, he was first at bat instead of later where he might have aided the cause extensively, for Travis and Harris singled in this frame and were left stranded.

Al Thomas Goes in.

Al Thomas went in for Weaver in the sixth and did tolerably well until the seventh when Ruth's two-baser scored Saltzgaver, who had poked his bat in front of a fourth hit. Thomas gave way to Pinch-hitter Schulte, whose place had been taken by Dave Harris, got 'em out, 1-2-3, and ancient Alex McColl finished up.

Washington wriggled out from under its lethargic mood in the eighth and turned on Mr. DeShong with a savage violence that threatened to blow him off the premises, but he survived to complete his game. Schulte was the instigator of the attempted revolt, shoving a long single to left after Sewell had been retired. Myer smacked his first hit of the fray into right field, propelling Fred around to third and was followed in turn by Johnny Stone with a single to center, Schulte pulling up at second.

Manush then popped up to Crosetti half way to center field, and a few minutes later Crosetti made a great stop of Cronin's apparent hit over second for a force-out at that base.

Tomorrow school will not keep, and Tuesday, of course, is the all-star shebang at the Polo Grounds, so the boys will have a nice, long rest.

Combine for No-Hit Game.

Playing with a Seattle amateur baseball team, Ed Percival and Lamar Gaw together pitched a no-hit no-run game against an Everett nine in their first game.

Fitzsimmons Hurls Giants To Victory

Allows But Three Hits as Brooklyn Bows by 2-0 Score.

Three of Eight Hits Off Zachary Used in Run-Coining.

BROOKLYN, July 8 (AP).—Fred Fitzsimmons earned an even break for the New York Giants in their four-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers today by pitching a 3-hit game to defeat Tom Zachary, 2 to 0. Only one Brooklyn player reached third base in the course of the swiftly played game.

Zachary allowed 8 hits. Manager Bill Terry's double and Mel Ott's single gave the Giants a run in the first inning. With two out in the fifth, Fitzsimmons tripled and scored when Frey committed a wild throw on a grounder by Hughie Critz.

Knight's Bid for First Honors Tops Glen Echo Meet Tonight

District Titleholder Is Favored Over Broaddus, Lyman; Marie Duvall to Defend Her Crown, With City's Greatest Battles in History Seen.

SOME of the smoothest diving and speediest swimming to take place in a Washington pool in years is promised for tonight, when half a hundred aquatic stars from Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia compete in the Crystal Pool meet at Glen Echo.

With Dave Livingstone, Yale swimming captain and National intercollegiate 220-yard champion, entered in two races and Johnnie Broaddus, District A. A. U. outdoor high board diving champion, defending his crown against Bob Knight, District indoor titleholder, and Joe Lyman, of Brown University, New England intercollegiate champion, tonight's big carnival should offer a varied and high-caliber program.

Marie Duvall to Defend.

From the feminine angle, Marie Duvall, District high-board champion, will be defending her title in the face of the able competition offered by Leonora Taube, District low board champion, and others, while the Capital's foremost speed mermaids are to battle in free-style and breast-stroke events.

Occupying the choice spot on the program will be Broaddus' attempt to answer the challenge of his two able rivals, for on the face of his remarkable diving at Maryland Club Gardens on the Fourth, Knight should win tonight's championship with something to spare.

One of the District's highest swimming officials who watched Knight beat Lyman, one of the East's finest college divers, on the Fourth, commented that the smiling young Central High graduate gave the classiest exhibition he had seen in the District since Pete Des Jardines, former Olympic champion, dived here. The mere fact that Knight led a diver of Lyman's caliber by a 13-point margin is enough to support the official's declaration.

Consequently, Broaddus will, in all probability, be needing every point he can roll up tonight. Lyman also must be considered as serious a contender as the other two.

Livingstone is conceded the 90-yard free style but providing Bill Marmioh, of the Y. M. C. A., is recovered from his late illness the Yale star may run into some tough opposition in the back stroke. Frank Cummings, of Baltimore, is another strong contender in the dorsal event.

Promising Battle.

The women's 90-yard free style offers a promising struggle among Rita Augusterfer, Betty O'Toole, Caroline Cox, Betty Thompson and Lydia Cort, of the Shoreham, with little to choose one way or the other. Miss Taube is a slight choice to take the 120-yard breast stroke.

The 440-yard free style for men probably will lower the present record of 5:58 1-5 set by Thornton Burns, of the Shoreham, in 1932. H. O. Kinsley, 6 foot 4 inch speedster from the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., and Frank Boggs, of the Washington "Y," should stage a merry battle in this event, with Bill Mackey and Robert Hack, of the Penn A. C., of Philadelphia, standing out among a flock of other fast contenders.

Tribe Takes Pair From White Sox

Wins, 5-1, 10-5, to Climb Back in First Flight.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 8 (AP).—The Indians won their first double-header of the year today, defeating the White Sox, 5 to 1, in the opener and 10 to 5 in the nightcap.

Willis Hudlin won his eighth game in the early battle, outpitching Sad Sam Jones and allowing the Sox only seven hits. Chicago scored in the first inning, but from then on not a runner reached third base. The tribe sewed up the game in the fourth inning by bunching four hits.

Unsteady in the early innings of the second game, Monte Pearson checked the Sox in the last five rounds and won his tenth victory.

Tigers Rally To Win Out In Ninth

Score Three Runs to Cop From Browns by 5-to-4 Count.

Two Errors by Melillo, Two Hits and Walk Net Victory.

DETROIT, July 8 (AP).—Two costly errors by Melillo and a pair of timely singles, all in the ninth inning, gave the Tigers a 5-to-4 victory over the St. Louis Browns in their series final here today.

Trailing 4 to 2 as the final inning opened, the Tigers got to Blaeholder for two singles, which sent that pitcher to the showers. The singles were hit by Owen and Rowe. Newsom supplanted Blaeholder, and the first man to face him was Fox, who hit a grounder, which Melillo booted, allowing the bases to be filled.

Walk Forces in Run.

Cochrane walked to force in Owen and Wells went in for Newsom. At this juncture Goslin bounced to Melillo and the latter threw wildly to the plate, trying to catch Rowe, and both Rowe and Fox scored.

Marberry started for Detroit, but was removed at the end of the sixth, after having allowed four hits. Rowe finished the game and got credit for the victory.

Philadelphia, July 8 (AP).—Euel Moore, Indian hurler recently obtained by the Phillies from Baltimore, won his opening major league start by defeating the Boston Braves, 5 to 3, today.

Moore allowed ten hits, but was well supported by his mates. He did not issue a base on balls and was tight in the pinches.

The Phillies made only seven hits off Barrett, but bunched them in the first and sixth innings. Dolph Camilli hit his eleventh home run of the season in the sixth inning with one man on base.

N-1600 Is Victorious In 10-Mile Boat Race

Chestertown, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—Two Delaware craft finished in the money of the first annual outboard derby run over a 10-mile course today under auspices of the Junior Yachtsmen of the Chester River Yacht Club. The race from Crumpton to Chestertown on the river course was won by the N-1600, a mahogany runabout owned and driven by E. C. F. Coleman, of Crumpton, in 26 mintes.

With 16 craft entered, several were disabled prior to and during the race, and the first three winners finished within 20 seconds of each other. The Special, a racing hydroplane driven by Tom Murray, of Dover, crossed the line the runner-up, and Man o' War, also a Dover hydroplane, driven by Edward F. Evans, came in third.

Red Sox Beat Athletics, 7-4, 7-2

Foxx Hits Two Homers and Bob Johnson One; 24,000 Look On.

BOSTON, July 8 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox today took both ends of a double-header from the Philadelphia Athletics before a crowd of 24,018, taking the first game, 7 to 4, despite three Athletic home runs, and the second, 7 to 2.

Henry Johnson pitched the opener for the Sox, striking out seven. The Athletics outhit the Red Sox, 12 to 7, but Dietrich's wildness cost him the game. He walked nine Boston batters and hit one.

Fred Ostermueller hurled effectively in the nightcap, and was never in danger after the Sox gave him a four-run lead in the first inning.

Foxx Slams Two.

Jimmie Foxx, Athletics first baseman, hit his twenty-fifth home run of the season in the seventh inning and his twenty-sixth in the ninth inning of the first game. His teammate, Bob Johnson, smashed out his twenty-fifth in the final inning of the first game. All three were hit with none on base.

Max Bishop, Sox second baseman, walked four times in each game. Roy Johnson drove in three runs in the first game and four in the second.

Today's victory gave the Red Sox four of the five games of the current series with Philadelphia.

Bryan 'Bitsy' Grant Decisively Wins U. S. Clay Courts Net Title

Cronin, Terry Both Predict Triumph

Odds Favor Americans, But Surprising Shift Is Made to Foes.

Hubbell - Gomez Duel an Important Angle to '34 Classic.

NEW YORK, July 8 (AP).—To hear the rival managers tell about it, neither the American nor the National League can lose the all-star game to be played in the Polo Grounds Tuesday.

"Gomez is just a fast-ball pitcher and we like speed," says Bill Terry, manager of the World Champion New York Giants and master mind of the National League forces. "We'll win this one."

"Do I think we will win?" asks Joe Cronin, Terry's managerial rival in the world series last fall and pilot of the American Leaguers. "Look at that line-up and tell me how we can lose."

Some Critics Swing.

Although the betting odds find the American League in the favorite's position, there has been a surprising swing toward the older circuit among competent baseball critics. Some of these frankly have confessed they were stringing along with Terry because of his gift of getting the most out of available material as well as because of his so-called "luck."

But admittedly anything can happen in a game where every man is a star of the first magnitude, where clouters feared far and wide match wits with the sport's finest pitchers —Vernon (Goofy) Gomez, Mel Harder, Red Ruffing, Tommy Bridges and Jack Russell, of the American League squad, and Carl Hubbell, Lon Warneke, Dizzy Dean, Van Mungo and Fred Frankhouse for the National.

Hubbell-Gomez Duel.

Not the least of the many attractive angles of the classic will be the southpaw duel between Hubbell and Gomez. They probably will pitch the first three innings, with Gabby Hartnett and Bill Dickey the prospective starting catchers.

Terry's starting line-up, as announced, will be remarkable because of the almost solid wall of right-handed hitters he will toss against Gomez. The infield of Terry, Frank Frisch, Pie Traynor and Travis Jackson, the outfield of Hazen Cuyler, Joe Medwick and Wally Berger, and the battery of Hubbell and Hartnett, contains eight men who bat from the right side of the plate, Terry himself being the lone exception. Al Lopez, who may get the call over Hartnett, likewise bats right-handed, but Army Vaughan, who may start at shortstop, is a southpaw hitter.

Six Portside Batters.

Cronin's starting American League line-up contains six left-handed batsmen—Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Charley Gehringer, Heinie Manush, Bill Dickey and Gomez—and three right, Cronin, Frank Higgins and Al Simmons.

A turn-out filling every one of the 53,602 seats apparently is assured. If so, the receipts would reach about $60,000, compared with the $42,000 the first all-star game drew at Chicago last year. The bulk of the receipts goes to the Players Benevolent Fund.

Pair in Net League Final at Columbia Club.

Mrs. Ruth Martinez, Washington's No. 1 ranking player, will meet Mary Ryan this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the final round of the Women's Tennis League tournament at Columbia Country Club.

Mrs. Martinez will be defending the title she won last year.

The match has been postponed due to rain and conflicting tournaments.

Homers in Vain

HEINIE MANUSH,
Nats' slugging fly-hawk, who yesterday cracked out two home runs against the Yankees. These helped nothing but his batting average, though, as his team dropped its third game of the four-game series with the league leaders.

given stage of the proceedings. His fast one had more hops than the boss' beer and his curves would have shamed Mae West.

Then I might refer you to the New York's runty third baseman, John Saltzgaver, for another cause incidental to the Nats' defeat. Saltzy pounded out four hits in as many tries and drove in three runs.

But I have forgotten about the sage of right field who should be resting easily in a home for aged if his critics are right—the Babe. The fat man plunked his thirteenth home run of the season high up in the right-field bleachers, scoring Saltzy ahead of him, and finished his usual seven-inning tour of duty with a lusty double to center, scoring the aforementioned Saltzy again. In all he drove in four of the Yanks' six runs. From a strictly Washington viewpoint their act was as entertaining as a busted radio. Ruth is sorry to see the Nats leave, for he needs only one more circuit drive to realize his ambition of socking 700. The Bambino's work was by way of celebrating the twentieth anniversary of his entry into the big leagues.

Following their usual custom, your Washington champions kindled the bright fire of hope in the breasts of some 19 Washingtonians present, assuming their usual 1-0 lead in their first turn at bat, thanks to Heinrich Manush's first clout.

Tie Score in Second.

The hosts came right back in their half and tied the score on hits by Crosetti and Saltzgaver, intermingled with an infield out. It was nip and tuck for one inning, but in the third Heffner and Saltzgavor joined hands in shoving over another run, putting Washington one back.

That third was a classic, and every sack on the diamond had an occupant when the final putout was made. A wild pitch, passed ball and a free ticket to Ruth helped the New Yorkers and added to the confusion and consternation of your favorites. Chapman conveniently grounded to Travis for a force-out at third ending the inning.

I already have reported how Ruth produced the next two runs before Cronin's gang could muster another score. Manush's second homer into the bleachers turned the trick, but unfortunately, he was first at bat instead of later where he might have aided the cause extensively, for Travis and Harris singled in this frame and were left stranded.

Al Thomas Goes in.

Al Thomas went in for Weaver in the sixth and did tolerably well until the seventh when Ruth's two-baser scored Saltzgaver, who had poked his bat in front of a fourth hit. Thomas gave way to Pinch-hitter Schulte, whose place had been taken by Dave Harris, got 'em out, 1-2-3, and ancient Alex McColl finished up.

Washington wriggled out from under its lethargic mood in the eighth and turned on Mr. DeShong with a savage violence that threatened to blow him off the premises, but he survived to complete his game. Schulte was the instigator of the attempted revolt, shoving a long single to left after Sewell had been retired. Myer smacked his first hit of the fray into right field, propelling Fred around to third and was followed in turn by Johnny Stone with a single to center, Schulte pulling up at second.

Manush then popped up to Crosetti half way to center field, and a few minutes later Crosetti made a great stop of Cronin's apparent hit over second for a force-out at that base.

Tomorrow school will not keep, and Tuesday, of course, is the all-star shebang at the Polo Grounds, so the boys will have a nice, long rest.

Fitzsimmons Hurls Giants To Victory

Three of Eight Hits Off Zachary Used in Run-Coining.

BROOKLYN, July 8 (AP).—Fred Fitzsimmons earned an even break for the New York Giants in their four-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers today by pitching a 3-hit game to defeat Tom Zachary, 2 to 0. Only one Brooklyn player reached third base in the course of the swiftly played game.

Zachary allowed 8 hits. Manager Bill Terry's double and Mel Ott's single gave the Giants a run in the first inning. With two out in the fifth, Fitzsimmons tripled and scored when Frey committed a wild throw on a grounder by Hughie Critz.

Knight's Bid for First Honors Tops Glen Echo Meet Tonight

District Titleholder Is Favored Over Broaddus, Lyman; Marie Duvall to Defend Her Crown, With City's Greatest Battles in History Seen.

SOME of the smoothest diving and speediest swimming to take place in a Washington pool in years is promised for tonight, when half a hundred aquatic stars from Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia compete in the Crystal Pool meet at Glen Echo.

With Dave Livingstone, Yale swimming captain and National intercollegiate 220-yard champion, entered in two races and Johnnie Broaddus, District A. A. U. outdoor high board diving champion, defending his crown against Bob Knight, District indoor titleholder, and Joe Lyman, of Brown University, New England intercollegiate champion, tonight's big carnival should offer a varied and high-caliber program.

Marie Duvall to Defend.

From the feminine angle, Marie Duvall, District high-board champion, will be defending her title in the face of the able competition offered by Leonora Taube, District low board champion, and others, while the Capital's foremost speed mermaids are to battle in free-style and breast-stroke events.

Occupying the choice spot on the program will be Broaddus' attempt to answer the challenge of his two able rivals, for on the face of his remarkable diving at Maryland Club Gardens on the Fourth, Knight should win tonight's championship with something to spare.

One of the District's highest swimming officials who watched Knight beat Lyman, one of the East's finest college divers, on the Fourth, commented that the smiling young Central High graduate gave the classiest exhibition he had seen in the District since Pete Des Jardines, former Olympic champion, dived here. The mere fact that Knight led a diver of Lyman's caliber by a 13-point margin is enough to support the official's declaration.

Consequently, Broaddus will, in all probability, be needing every point he can roll up tonight. Lyman also must be considered as serious a contender as the other two.

Livingstone is conceded the 90-yard free style but providing Bill Marmioh, of the Y. M. C. A., is recovered from his late illness the Yale star may run into some tough opposition in the back stroke. Frank Cummings, of Baltimore, is another strong contender in the dorsal event.

Promising Battle.

The women's 90-yard free style offers a promising struggle among Rita Augusterfer, Betty O'Toole, Caroline Cox, Betty Thompson and Lydia Cort, of the Shoreham, with little to choose one way or the other. Miss Taube is a slight choice to take the 120-yard breast stroke.

The 440-yard free style for men probably will lower the present record of 5:58 1-5 set by Thornton Burns, of the Shoreham, in 1932. H. O. Kinsley, 6 foot 4 inch speedster from the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., and Frank Boggs, of the Washington "Y," should stage a merry battle in this event, with Bill Mackey and Robert Hack, of the Penn A. C., of Philadelphia, standing out among a flock of other fast contenders.

Tribe Takes Pair From White Sox

Wins, 5-1, 10-5, to Climb Back in First Flight.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 8 (AP).—The Indians won their first double-header of the year today, defeating the White Sox, 5 to 1, in the opener and 10 to 5 in the nightcap.

Willis Hudlin won his eighth game in the early battle, outpitching Sad Sam Jones and allowing the Sox only seven hits. Chicago scored in the first inning, but from then on not a runner reached third base. The tribe sewed up the game in the fourth inning by bunching four hits.

Unsteady in the early innings of the second game, Monte Pearson checked the Sox in the last five rounds and won his tenth victory.

Tigers Rally To Win Out In Ninth

Score Three Runs to Cop From Browns by 5-to-4 Count.

Two Errors by Melillo, Two Hits and Walk Net Victory.

DETROIT, July 8 (AP).—Two costly errors by Melillo and a pair of timely singles, all in the ninth inning, gave the Tigers a 5-to-4 victory over the St. Louis Browns in their series final here today.

Trailing 4 to 2 as the final inning opened, the Tigers got to Blaeholder for two singles, which sent that pitcher to the showers. The singles were hit by Owen and Rowe. Newsom supplanted Blaeholder, and the first man to face him was Fox, who hit a grounder, which Melillo booted, allowing the bases to be filled.

Walk Forces in Run.

Cochrane walked to force in Owen and Wells went in for Newsom. At this juncture Goslin bounced to Melillo and the latter threw wildly to the plate, trying to catch Rowe, and both Rowe and Fox scored.

Marberry started for Detroit, but was removed at the end of the sixth, after having allowed four hits. Rowe finished the game and got credit for the victory.

He batted .450 with Northwestern this spring.

N-1600 Is Victorious In 10-Mile Boat Race

Chestertown, Md., July 8 (Spl.). Two Delaware craft finished in the money of the first annual outboard derby run over a 10-mile course today under auspices of the Junior Yachtsmen of the Chester River Yacht Club. The race from Crumpton to Chestertown on the river course was won by the N-1600, a mahogany runabout owned and driven by E. C. F. Coleman, of Crumpton, in 26 mintes.

With 16 craft entered, several were disabled prior to and during the race, and the first three winners finished within 20 seconds of each other. The Special, a racing hydroplane driven by Tom Murray, of Dover, crossed the line the runner-up, and Man o' War, also a Dover hydroplane, driven by Edward F. Evans, came in third.

Red Sox Beat Athletics, 7-4, 7-2

Foxx Hits Two Homers and Bob Johnson One; 24,000 Look On.

BOSTON, July 8 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox today took both ends of a double-header from the Philadelphia Athletics before a crowd of 24,018, taking the first game, 7 to 4, despite three Athletic home runs, and the second, 7 to 2.

Henry Johnson pitched the opener for the Sox, striking out seven. The Athletics outhit the Red Sox, 12 to 7, but Dietrich's wildness cost him the game. He walked nine Boston batters and hit one.

Fred Ostermueller hurled effectively in the nightcap, and was never in danger after the Sox gave him a four-run lead in the first inning.

Foxx Slams Two.

Jimmie Foxx, Athletics first baseman, hit his twenty-fifth home run of the season in the seventh inning and his twenty-sixth in the ninth inning of the first game. His teammate, Bob Johnson, smashed out his twenty-fifth in the final inning of the first game. All three were hit with none on base.

Max Bishop, Sox second baseman, walked four times in each game. Roy Johnson drove in three runs in the first game and four in the second.

Serody Stricken, Forcing Substitution for Fight Here Tonight With McMahon

Jack Portney Sought for Battle

Young Fighter Suffers Appendicitis Attack; Is in Hospital.

Irving Meets Johnson; Kushmer to Tackle Bob Wilson.

HARRY SERODY, promising young lightweight, who was to have boxed Billy McMahon in a ten-round feature at the Riding and Hunt Club tonight, was stricken by acute appendicitis in Philadelphia yesterday, leaving the Hunt Club temporarily without a suitable opponent for McMahon. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is negotiating with Jack Portner, ranking lightweight from Baltimore, to substitue for the Philadelphia prospect.

Serody was stricken early yesterday, a few hours before he was to have left for Washington. He was immediately removed to Mount Sinai Hospital for an emergency operation and his condition was reported favorable last night.

Beat Wesley Ramey.

In Portney, if Ahearn is successful in closing out for the fight, McMahon will be facing one of the most feared fighters in the lightweight and welterweight ranks. A southpaw with a punch in either hand, Portney has decisioned some outstanding fighters in the divisions ruled by Barney Ross. He punctured the Wesley Ramey bubble shortly after the Michigan flash showed so impressively here against Ray Bowen.

McMahon has a draw with Tony Falco to his credit and has decisioned such prime pushers of punches as Jose Lombardi, Andy DiVodi, Pete Nebo and Johnny Gaito, to mention only a few. He is a wading-in type of fighter who always knows why and towards what he is wading. Not to be classed as a "flashy" boxer, he can best be described as "cagey," which he will need to bei f he faces Portney.

Irving Faces Johnson.

In a six-round semifinal, Henry Irving, the Northeast Knockerout, will meet K. O. (Swede) Johnson, of New York. Hank always is funny and a guy named K. O. Swede is bound to be comical. Otto Kushmer, Beverly May's promising middleweight from Florida, will tackle Bob Wilson, a stable mate of Serody's in another six.

In a brace of fours, Deacon Owens, the best dressed heavyweight in the ring, will engage Mr. Iceman Burke. The Deacon knocked his last opponent cold and will try to do the same to Mr. Iceman. The remaining four will be announced from the ringside.

Around the ring's selections: This McCormick favors Serody, Irvingn to beat Johnson, Kushmer to outbox Wilson, Owens over Burke and Jimmy Lake to win the unannounced four.

Annapolis Nine Downs Quantico Marines, 8-3

Annapolis, Md., July 8 (Spl.). — The Annapolis baseball club defeated the Quantico Marines in a well-played game here today, 8 to 3.

Annapolis held a slight edge throughout, although it was anybody's battle until the eighth session, when the home team staged a four-run rally.

A circuit clout by Irving Lowman with two on in that frame was the high spot of the contest. The batteries were: Annapolis, Hollidaycke, Woytych and Kane, Williams; Marines, Nichols and Reed.

with Bill Bennings.

ROCKINGHAM BOUND, July 8.

Dear Al:

Well friend, I was at Charles Town so long I feel like the guy who invented mountain music. We had a good time up there wrestling with the house horses that the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club gathered for that marathon meeting. In fact, I hated to say good-by. I was at the mercy of the boss as to where I went next. He said Rockingham Park and, knowing that Mike and I must eat, I said O. K. So here we are, the old Bennings mutuel wreckers, Rockingham bound, aiming to give you the same good service. I told Mike the track was at Salem, N. H., and he says: "You better be careful how you pick 'em up there, Bill. You know they have witchcraft laws up in that country." I didn't let that influence me, however, when I dug into the speed books. We might need a day or two to get acclimated but we are going to make dough there, I do believe.

BILL.

First race—Well, we're stepping right from Charles Town into a 2-year-old maiden race, which is quite an assignment. Personally, from what I learn in the books, I lean to Radiator. Mike prefers Sweepogan, and we both believe Gay Blade has a fighting chance to upset the dope.

Second race—Juvenile maidens also hold the fort in this. Dancing Queen has the best figure of the gang and goes for the Bennings dough. Great Master and Khelaboo for the other awards.

Third race—The ancient and honorable The Heathen is sprinting well these days and may find this field to his liking. Escapes a heavy assignment by the appearance of an apprentice rider. However, he is a front runner who needs only guiding when right. Happy Message will do it if the top fellow misses. Grace Blotter for the show.

Fourth race—Crazy Jane and Bedight appear to be the ones to fight it out for the major end of the purse in this sprint. Both are fit as hands can make them. Toytime (I'm not positive of his condition) would make it tough for the top pair if he runs his best race.

Fifth race—I'm going to try to rock the mutuels for a good price with Dark Hope. I am positive he can beat these. Needs a little hustling at the break. If he gets that, it will be all over except the pay-off. Star Porter is the one to beat. The Pelican for the rest.

Sixth race—Moane Keala gets in this with light weight. Any price will be a good one. The No. 1 post position may help make Playing On a threat. Zipalong is a possible upsetter.

Seventh race—Butter Beans appears most formidable of this field. Meets the right kind. Sambo Brown won two races in a day here last week and will be the one to beat. Zembla's recent win was encouraging.

Hagerstown Is Victor Over Frederick, 7 to 5

Frederick, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—Frederick dropped its first home game of the season today at McCurdy Field to Hagerstown, 7 to 5, in the Blue Ridge League. Hagerstown won in the seventh, when Fraley weakened and singles by Kildow, Hesson, Ervin, Hickey and Keller accounted for four runs.

Hagerstown chalked up one run in the second frame on a walk, stolen base and single by Doffiemyer. Frederick took the lead by scoring two in the same session on two walks, sacrifice, stolen base, and single by Baer, and added one more in the third on a pair of walks, fielder's choice, and single by Hartman.

Hagerstown evened matters in the fifth inning, when three singles, a fielder's choice and error counted for two runs. Frederick again forged ahead in the same frame on singles by Hartman, Steele and Himes and a sacrifice by Angleberger.

Serody Stricken, Forcing Substitution for Fight Here Tonight With McMahon

Jack Portney Sought for Battle

Young Fighter Suffers Appendicitis Attack; Is in Hospital.

Irving Meets Johnson; Kushmer to Tackle Bob Wilson.

HARRY SERODY, promising young lightweight, who was to have boxed Billy McMahon in a ten-round feature at the Ridin gand Hunt Club tonight, was stricken by acute appendicitis in Philadelphia yesterday, leaving the Hunt Club temporarily without a suitable opponent for McMahon. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is negotiating with Jack Portner, ranking lightweight from Baltimore, to substitue for the Philadelphia prospect.

Serody was stricken early yesterday, a few hours before he was to have left for Washington. He was immediately removed to Mount Sinai Hospital for an emergency operation and his condition was reported favorable last night.

Beat Wesley Ramey.

In Portney, if Ahearn is successful in closing out for the fight, McMahon will be facing one of the most feared fighters in the lightweight and welterweight ranks. A southpaw with a punch in either hand, Portney has decliisoned some outstanding fighters in the divisions ruled by Barney Ross. He punctured the Wesley Ramey bubble shortly after the Michigan flash showed so impressively here against Ray Bowen.

McHahon has a draw with Tony Falco to his credit and has decisioned such prime pushers of punches as Jose Lombardi, Andy DiVodi, Pete Nebo and Johnny Gaito, to mention only a few. He is a wading-in type of fighter who always knows why and towards what he is wading. Not to be classed as a "flashy" boxer, he can best be described as "cagey," which he will need to bei f he faces Portney.

Irving Faces Johnson.

In a six-round semifinal, Henry Irving, the Northeast Knockerout, will meet K. O. (Swede) Johnson, of New York. Hank always is funny and a guy named K. O. Swede is bound to be comical. Otto Kushmer, Beverly May's promising middleweight from Florida, will tackle Bob Wilson, a stable mate of Serody's in another six.

In a brace of fours, Deacon Owens, the best dressed heavyweight in the ring, will engage Mr. Iceman Burke. The Deacon knocked his last opponent cold and will try to do the same to Mr. Iceman. The remaining four will be announced from the ringside.

Around the ring's selections: This McCormick favors Serody, Irvingn to beat Johnson, Kushmer to outbox Wilson, Owens over Burke and Jimmy Lake to win the unannounced four.

Annapolis Nine Downs Quantico Marines, 8-3

Annapolis, Md., July 8 (Spl.). — The Annapolis baseball club defeated the Quantico Marines in a well-played game here today, 8 to 3.

Annapolis held a slight edge throughout, although it was anybody's battle until the eighth session, when the home team staged a four-run rally.

A circuit clout by Irving Lowman with two on in that frame was the high spot of the contest. The batteries were: Annapolis, Hollidaycke, Woytych and Kane, Williams; Marines, Nichols and Reed.

Here is Little Lie, leading the field on turn into stretch, in the opening race of the summer meeting. Little Lie was honest with the form players, coming home as they figured, to pay no better than even money. Back Fence was up in time to grab the place, while Ever True was true only to those figuring it would finish third.

ROCKINGHAM BOUND, July 8.

Dear Al:

Well friend, I was at Charles Town so long I feel like the guy who invented mountain music. We had a good time up there wrestling with the house horses that the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club gathered for that marathon meeting. In fact, I hated to say good-by. I was at the mercy of the boss as to where I went next. He said Rockingham Park and, knowing that Mike and I must eat, I said O. K. So here we are, the old Bennings mutuel wreckers, Rockingham bound, aiming to give you the same good service. I told Mike the track was at Salem, N. H., and he says: "You better be careful how you pick 'em up there, Bill. You know they have witchcraft laws up in that country." I didn't let that influence me, however, when I dug into the speed books. We might need a day or two to get acclimated but we are going to make dough there, I do believe.

BILL.

First race—Well, we're stepping right from Charles Town into a 2-year-old maiden race, which is quite an assignment. Personally, from what I learn in the books, I lean to Radiator. Mike prefers Sweepogan, and we both believe Gay Blade has a fighting chance to upset the dope.

Second race—Juvenile maidens also hold the fort in this. Dancing Queen has the best figure of the gang and goes for the Bennings dough. Great Master and Khelaboo for the other awards.

Third race—The ancient and honorable The Heathen is sprinting well these days and may find this field to his liking. Escapes a heavy assignment by the appearance of an apprentice rider. However, he is a front runner who needs only guiding when right. Happy Message will do it if the top fellow misses. Grace Blotter for the show.

Fourth race—Crazy Jane and Bedight appear to be the ones to fight it out for the major end of the purse in this sprint. Both are fit as hands can make them. Toytime (I'm not positive of his condition) would make it tough for the top pair if he runs his best race.

Fifth race—I'm going to try to rock the mutuels for a good price with Dark Hope. I am positive he can beat these. Needs a little hustling at the break. If he gets that, it will be all over except the pay-off. Star Porter is the one to beat. The Pelican for the rest.

Sixth race—Moane Keala gets in this with light weight. Any price will be a good one. The No. 1 post position may help make Playing On a threat. Zipalong is a possible upsetter.

Seventh race—Butter Beans appears most formidable of this field. Meets the right kind. Sambo Brown won two races in a day here last week and will be the one to beat. Zembla's recent win was encouraging.

Hagerstown Is Victor Over Frederick, 7 to 5

Frederick, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—Frederick dropped its first home game of the season today at McCurdy Field to Hagerstown, 7 to 5, in the Blue Ridge League. Hagerstown won in the seventh, when Fraley weakened and singles by Kildow, Hesson, Ervin, Hickey and Keller accounted for four runs.

Hagerstown chalked up one run in the second frame on a walk, stolen base and single by Dofflemyer. Frederick took the lead by scoring two in the same session on two walks, sacrifice, stolen base, and single by Baer, and added one more in the third on a pair of walks, fielder's choice, and single by Hartman.

Hagerstown evened matters in the fifth inning, when three singles, a fielder's choice and error counted for two runs. Frederick again forged ahead in the same frame on singles by Hartman, Steele and Himes and a sacrifice by Angleberger.

Chicago, July 8 (AP).—The Cubs and Pittsburgh divided a doubleheader before an overflow crowd of 47,138 fans today.

The Cubs pounded out 16 hits against five pitchers to take the second game, 12 to 3, after the Pirates had wiped out a four-run disadvantage to take the opener, 11 to 4. P. Waner in the opener and Gabby Hartnett in the second game hit homers.

First Game.

Kann's Defeats Hecht, 10-3, For Title

Pile Up Nine Runs in Early Innings and Coast in Behind Wallach.

KANN'S young spirited ball team climaxed its dramatic winning streak in the Department Store League by routing its arch-rival, the Hecht's Store, 10 to 3, in the deciding game for first-half honors yesterday. It was the final game of a play-off series among these teams and Palais Royal, all of which were tied for first place.

Led by Tommy Nolan, Harry Bassin, Joe Mills and Jack McCarthy, the Kannsmen fell upon Johnny Wolf and Augie Tamagni in the early innings for 9 runs, which proved an adequate margin behind the fine pitching of Bob Wallach. Except for the fourth inning, when the losers scored all their runs, Wallach hurled shut-out ball, fanning nine Hecht batters and keeping control of the situation generally at all times.

Was Far in Lead.

The same aggregation of former Eastern High players, who dominated yesterday's victory, transformed Kann's team into a strong pennant contender the day they put on the Kann uniforms. At that time Hecht's was far ahead of the field in the quest for first-half title and was virtually conceded the winner by everyone except the Kann's newcomers. The second series will begin next Saturday.

Chesapeake Nine Wins From Portsmouth, 16-6

West Point, Va., July 8.—The Chesapeake baseball team continued its winning streak here today by trouncing the Navy Yard team of Portsmouth by the overwhelming score of 16 to 6. Chesapeake hit the ball at will after the sixth inning. In the seventh, it tallied five and made six more in the eighth.

Manager Bill Gwathmey with a home run and triple was the hitting star of the day with Horace Wolfe coming up with a home run and single. Tom Wolfe and Waddy Stewart hit three baggers, the former also getting a pair of singles. Red rPoctor allowed ten widely scattered hits and seldom had to bear down. This was the twenty-first consecutive win for the locals this year. They having won 25 out of the 28 games played.

The Majestic team of Washington comes here for a two game series next week-end July 14 and 15.

San Francisco Ready To Welcome Little

San Francisco, July 8 (AP).—San Francisco will turn out tomorrow to welcome Lawson Little, winner of the recent British amateur golf championship.

The husky young man will be met at the Ferry Building by a delegation of golf and civic leaders, and escorted to the city hall where Mayor Angelo Rossi will tender an official greeting. At a huge banquet in the evening, Mayor Rossi will present Little with a gold medal, making him an honorary member of all San Francisco public links.

Clarendon Jrs. First-Half Titlists

Win Over All-Stars, 11-8, on Tolford's Homer With Bases Full.

LITTLE WILLIE TOLFORD cracked a home run with the bases filled in the eighth inning to win the first-half pennant for the Clarendon Juniors over the Eastern All-Stars, 11 to 8, yesterday in the National City Junior League.

Tolford's decisive circuit clout was one of his three hits, which altogether accounted for seven of his teams runs. Jimmie Schwab and Ralph Cooper pressed Tolford for hitting laurels, each connecting for three safe blows in the 15-hit melee of the victors.

Howard Preston held the All-Stars to seven hits, but errors of his teammates aided Eastern in scoring most of its eight runs. Preston retired nine batsmen via the strikeout route as did Charlie Cuozzo, the All-Stars' moundsman.

Vanderbilt's Cup Boat Meets New Obstacle

Newport, R. I., July 8 (AP).—Rainbow, the boat Harold S. Vanderbilt and his associates built in the hope of defending the America's Cup, continues to sail stormy seas. Today the America's Cup committee went up to Bristol and ordered two winches removed from below and brought up on deck.

The winches are used to handle the luff ropes of the jib and staysail. Rainbow's designer, W. Starling Burgess, contended the winches were properly part of the rigging, but the committee, headed by George Nichols, ruled they were used to handle sail and belonged on deck.

Irwin and Grimes Win Chevy Chase Net Play

Harry Irwin and B. Grimes emerged victorious from a round-robin tennis tournament between nine teams at Chevy Chase yesterday. Each team played the other five games—a total of 40 games—and at the end of the tournament the Irwin-Grimes aggregation was tied with Harry Moorhead and Arthur Hellen with 25 won and 15 lost apiece.

Irwin and Grimes won the play-off, 8to 6, after four times having been within one point of losing when the Moorhead-Hellen duo led 5 to 3 in games and had them 40-love and again gained the advantage while leading, 6 to 5, in games.

Carnera Pulls Up in Atlanta On Way From 'N. Y. to Maine'

ATLANTA, July 8 (AP).—Somewhat a man of mystery, Primo Carnera, the former heavyweight champion, popped up here today insisting he was on his way from New York to Maine by way of Atlanta. It was believed he was en route to Palm Beach, despite his insistence that he was going the other way.

The big Italian thumbed a ride here last night after his 16-cylinder car broke down at Toccoa, Ga., and he was hoisted to his hotel room in a freight elevator, denying himself to visitors until shortly before his departure.

Carnera explained the detour to Maine by way of Atlanta by saying he was "just taking a little drive with friends."

The former title holder was using crutches and the ankle which he said was fractured in the fight with Max Baer was still encased in a plaster cast.

Some one suggested the roving Alp might already have been to Florida. This he denied, declaring it was too hot. He also denied he was en route to Italy, thundering this would not be "until I'm champion again."

Reports from New York said Carnera left his hotel Friday, but the dethroned champion said he had been to Louisville as well as a number of other Southern cities, the names of which he did not know. He was reported seen yesterday in North Carolina.

The automobile was delivered to Carnera today after repairs were made at Toccoa.

Delphine VII Captures Hampton Boat Event

Hampton, Va., July 8 (AP).—The Delphine VII, owned by Mrs. Raymond T. Baker, of Washington, and piloted by Walter Leveau, with Del Haney as mechanic, captured the Gold Cup race, feature event of the seventh annual Hampton regatta, today with an average speed over the 30-mile course of 52.05 miles an hour.

The Imp, owned and piloted by Jack Ruthafurd, of New York and Miami, paced the field for the first eleven heats, but developed motor trouble at the final turn, and the Delphine VII raced ahead to victory.

Maryland Polo Club Defeats Hagerstown

Steevnson, Md., July 8 (AP).—The hard-riding Maryland Polo Club team today went on a scoring rampage to beat the Hagerstown Polo Club, 19 to 9, on the former's field here. The score at half-time was 14 to 7.

The local riders fired constantly at the goal, the majority of their shots being from more than 40 yards away. The wild shooting for the goals was reduced considerably during the second half.

Extra Dry Sets New Record In Victory

Brisk Northeast Wind Aids in Lewes Yacht Club Handicap Race.

LEWES, Del., July 8 (Spl.).—A brisk northeast wind blowing 20 miles an hour furnished fine sailing for the seven entries in the Lewes Yacht Club weekly handicap class race this afternoon in the Delaware Breakwater which covered the course in the fastest sailing time of the season. A visiting entry, the Comanche, skippered by Richard Kelley, of Dover, capsized just as the fleet moth type sailboat was nosing out other entries at the beginning of the second lap.

Virden Burton, Lewes, in Extra Dry, won first place in 34 minutes 53 seconds, corrected time. aLst week's winner, Frank Carter, jr., in the Skippy, placed second in 36 minutes 16 seconds, and George Fleming, Ardmore, in the Dipper, came third, 40 minutes 14 seconds. Security, sailed by H. Hargadine, Wilmington, placed fourth, 55 minutes 36 seconds; the Nira, of Richard Shields, jr., Lewes, fifth, 55 minutes 43 seconds, and Blue Hen II, Leighton Dorsey, Wilmington, sixth place, time, 68 minutes 49 seconds.

The Dipper still leads in the season's regattas with 33½ standing points, the Extra Dry is only one-fourth of a point less.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Neighbors — By Harry J. Tuthill

YES, MY OWN, I DID HEAR SOMETHING ABOUT THE BUNGLES TAKING A WATER TRIP. WHAT'S UP? IS NOZZLE-NOSE GEORGE GOING TO GIVE 'EM A RIDE IN A ROW BOAT?
THEY'RE GOING ON A YACHT. WHEN MRS. BUNGLE TOLD ME I THOUGHT IT WAS JUST TALK, BUT I SAW THEIR NAMES IN THE SOCIETY COLUMN.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 7-9
WHEN MRS. BUNGLE STOPPED ME IN THE HALL I PRETENDED I HADN'T SEEN THE SOCIETY ITEM. WELL SHE JUST BOILED AND THEN WITH THAT HIGH-TONED AIR, COPIED FROM THE MOVIES, SHE WALKED INTO HER FLAT.
A YACHT TRIP! AND HALF THE TIME THEY HAVEN'T ENOUGH TO EAT.
LISTEN CLARA, WHADDO I CARE IF ALL THE BUNGLES IN THE WORLD ARE GOING ON A YACHT TRIP AND ALSO WHADDO I CARE IF THEY NEVER COME BACK? NONE.
SUCH LANGUAGE! OH NO WONDER OUR CELESTE, WHO'S SO MUCH BETTER LOOKING THAN THAT BUNGLE GIRL, WANTS TO MARRY A POET.
IMAGINE THOSE BUNGLES GOING ON A YACHT TRIP. THE ONLY TIME I GO ANYWHERE IS WHEN YOU ASK ME TO GO OVER AND HELP YOU ARGUE WITH YOUR PEOPLE.
BABE, LIKE I SAY, WE'D HAVE OUR OWN YACHT RIGHT NOW IF IT WASN'T FOR WALL STREET. DON'T WORRY, BABE, THINGS WILL COME BACK. THEN I'LL BUY TWO YACHTS.

Walt Mason, Himself

Science and Sense.

I dreamed that I was falling about a hundred miles, from mountain tops appalling, to land on rocky piles. It is a fearful feeling, to have such dreams as these, and fall from cloudy ceiling to smash upon the trees. I said, "I'll place reliance on Herr Professor Gripe, who's primed with mental science and all that sort of tripe." He talked of inhibitions, complexes large and small, of painful soul conditions that back men to the wall. He talked of mighty thinkers who write of themes like these to earn their bread and sinkers and liverwurst and cheese. He whooped around and spluttered, a volume in his hand; and not a word he uttered that I could understand. He quoted famous scholars as being Learning's heirs, then soaked me for ten dollars and kicked me down the stairs. Outside I saw Doc Proctor and told him of my dream; "Poor chump," exclaimed the doctor, "you've swallowed too much cream; no doubt you're always eating the things you should eschew; throughout the day repeating your bowl of Irish stew. No wonder if you're screaming in nightmares through the night, no wonder if you're dreaming of falling from a height. Cut out the heavy feeding and live on boneset tea, the only sane proceeding—and I will ask no fee."

Radio Waves and Ripples

HEAT and its companionate annoyer, humidity, apparently mean nothing to radio's statistics hunters. We can see them now perspiring over figures and charts, laboring far into the steamy night, counting, counting—counting what?

Counting, speaking for Columbia's statistics department, the number of miles the Byrd broadcasts have traversed. The figure is 337,000, checked and double checked.

That positively does not, says the Columbia publicity department which reports things like this for the statistics department, include network miles, space consumed in distributing Byrd programs to 86 or so stations. Momentarily, at least, the statistics department is specializing in counting air-line miles.

Unhappily, the mileage total is nothing compared to what it might have been. All the time Admiral Byrd and his party were crawling down from Norfolk, Columbia was sending them programs from London, Honolulu, New Zealand, &c. If only Columbia had waited until the admiral settled himself at Little America for the summer. That would have given the statistics department, indeed, a figure.

We should like to see the statistics boys next Thursday morning. We should like to watch their faces when they add to 337,000 miles, 17,000 miles, which is the distance the Columbia signal will hop in getting from the Arctic to the Antarctic in that first happy radio union of the North-South antipodes Wednesday night.

"NIC" and Susie are gone. But they left behind them with explicit instructions for delivery—two chickens and one rock. The chickens "Nic" raised. The rock he picked up one day while wandering about the Mount Rushmore memorial. The rock is a souvenir.

One chicken, he said, goes to President Roosevelt. The other, "Nic" said, should be dispatched to God. Then he thought . . . hard. And the warm light of adoration crept into his eyes. The rock, he said, should be John Mayo's.

John is the N. B. C. announcer who put "Nic" on the air for an interview last Wednesday.

"Nic"—Broussard's his last name—is the Louisiana's original Roosevelt-before-Chicago man, the State's No. 1 New Dealer, who rode a buggy some 1,600 miles to the White House last week.

Susie's the 9-year-old horse that pulled the buggy.

Frank Buck, whose "bring 'em back alive" exploits are rivalled only by the facility with which his own cameramen happen to be around when pythons, tigers and crocodiles are about to indulge in a little mortal combat, has been hired to give Amos 'n' Andy their first vacation in eight years.

Amos and Mrs. Amos (Mr. and Mrs. Freeman L. Gosden) are heading for Alaska, where Amos hopes to do a "mess of fishin'." Andy and Mrs. Andy (Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Correll) sail July 17 to see Europe.

Buck and his tales of the jungles come to the air a week from tomorrow. Amos and Andy return September 17.

Ripples . . .

Film Actor James Gleason, heard last night with his missus on N. B. C.'s Hall of Fame, has been acting since he was two months old . . . he "played" the baby in an ancient piece called "Clouds" . . . Carson Robinson's going back to C. B. S. with his Bar X Days and Nights after a long run for the same sponsor on N. B. C. . . . for Babe Ruth is claimed an all-time record for results to advertiser in 13 weeks of broadcasting . . . "I was just talking natural-like to the kids," explains the Babe . . . normally Frank Black, N. B. C. musical director, will look over just about anything these ambitious young composers send him, but he gave up the other day when shown: "Suite for Seven Oboes, Three Bassoons and Cello" . . . if "Babs" Ryan, of Waring's Pennsylvanians, likes you, you're a "sugarumpkins," if not—get this—she calls you "beastie" . . . you may call the coroner or just go away somewhere and forget . . . he anchored his sailboat at Glen Cove, Long Island, and struck out for the woods . . . in less than ten minutes the daring "Buck Rogers" was coming back, a dog at his heels . . . he'd left his "jumping belt" home . . . the only Fourth of July accident in Little America was Alton Wade's case of frostbite!

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Billie Gets His Head Punched

That was a great load of good meat that Hee-Haw pulled back to the house, and it was a lot of pats on the back that Jocko Monkey got from all the boys for making such a good shot. And they all told Chatter Squirrel that he was pretty smart to lead all those turkeys right up to Jocko.

Bettie had breakfast waiting for them when they got back with the turkeys, and they were all just as ready for breakfast. After breakfast, Bettie told them they could do what they pleased, as she and Grandma Bear would tend to the turkeys, so they all went out on the porch and lit their pipes and told stories.

Billie Possum knocked the ashes out of his pipe and said: "These turkeys remind me a little of chickens, and chickens have come mighty near getting me in trouble several times.

"One night before I came to the creek I had just the greatest sort of appetite for a nice young chicken supper, and I knew where a lot of them slept in a house with the big chickens. But the man where the chickens lived would shut the chicken house door every night, and so there wasn't any chance for me to get in there after dark. These people didn't have any dog, and I knew if I could ever get in the chicken house when they were in there I could get away with a chicken. But how was I going to keep the chickens from finding me and making a great to-do when they went in to go to bed?

"One afternoon I went over and climbed up a tree not far from the house and looked all about to see if I could plan some way of getting supper. And I did. There didn't seem to be anybody about the place but one man, and he was fixing to plant some potatoes. He poured all of the potatoes out of a bag into a basket, and then he threw the bag down right near the chicken house. Then he took his donkey and plow and the basket and went out in the field to plant his potatoes. And you know how foolish chickens are about following a plow, and eating the bugs and worms that it turns up. Well, every single chicken followed the man out in the field, and there wasn't anybody left to see me.

"I ran to the bag and grabbed it up and crawled into the chicken house. I just sat around in there till nearly dark, when I saw the chickens coming home. Then I crawled over to the very back of the house and rolled the bag all around me.

"In a little while the chickens were all on their roosts, and not a chicken had paid any attention to the bag. The door was still open and the man was in the lot giving his donkey his supper, and now was my time to get mine.

"I kicked the bag off of me, grabbed my chicken in my mouth and jumped through the door. A big rooster jumped, too, and he got one good peck on my back before I could get away. And that rooster and all the other chickens made more noise than I ever thought chickens could make, and the man came running out of the lot. When he saw me, he picked up a rock and threw it at me, and hit me just enough to knock the hair and skin off of this little white place on the top of my head," and he turned his head down so they could see it.

"I got away with my chicken, but that man could throw a rock so straight that I didn't ever go there for another supper."

Hot Wave Is Fatal To Harvest Horses In HagerstownArea

Hagerstown, Md., July 8 (Spl.).—The hot wave has taken a heavy toll among horses on farms in Washington County, a number having died while working in the fields.

While the weather has been ideal for curing wheat, it has been necessary for farmers to use five horses to draw equipment, where in normal harvest weather, three will suffice.

Farmers are taking more care and are limiting the water for drinking purposes, one of the principal causes of deaths among the animals.

LOOK AT BRAKES AND BODIES_

NOW THAT PRICES ARE ALL THE SAME

TODAY, MOST PEOPLE KNOW that the prices of "All Three" low-priced cars are pretty much alike. Models may differ by a few dollars . . . but it's safe to say that when a Plymouth Special Six is delivered at your door, it costs you about the same as the comparable model of either of Plymouth's two competitors.

So when you look at "All Three" today . . . there's only one thing to think about . . . WHICH IS THE BEST CAR—WHICH GIVES YOU THE MOST FOR YOUR MONEY? We'll admit that "All Three" are good automobiles. But before you pay your hard-earned dollars for any car, consider these things:

When you put your foot on the brake, will that car stop dead in its tracks? When your wife and children drive away, will you know they are safe, surrounded by a body of steel—reinforced with steel?

Even if Plymouth COST MORE . . . which it probably doesn't . . . these things would be worth it. The Special Six has Hydraulic Brakes, Safety-Steel Body and the same type Individual Wheel Springing as used on the most expensive cars. It has Floating Power engine mountings that end motor vibration.

It has the luxuries . . . the little refinements of style and beauty . . . that make you proud to own a car. Yet the price of this automobile is right in line with comparable models of its two biggest competitors.

Look at the prices on the right. Look at the car at any Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer. Don't pay a deposit on any other car until you do.
